POWER OF U.S.
DEFENSES IS STRONGEST EVERFully Capable of Deterring War, He Asserts
—He Views East-
West Atom Accord
as Step to Summit.By JAMES DEAKIN
A Washington Correspondent
of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20—President Eisenhower, taking note of charges by some Democratic Senators that the United States is falling behind Russia militarily, said today this country's defenses are not only adequate, they are the most powerful they have ever been.

The President told his news conference the defense set-up is completely capable of deterring war, as it is intended to do. He added that in certain defense areas he believes the Government is spending too much money.

In response to another question, Mr. Eisenhower said the tentative East-West scientific agreement on a detection system to enforce an international ban on nuclear weapons tests was most encouraging.

Step Toward Summit.
At the same time, he told reporters, he could not say whether the agreement, reached yesterday in Geneva, was of itself sufficient preparation for a summit conference.

He indicated, however, that the detection plan might be one of a series of steps leading toward an eventual meeting at the summit. The United States, he explained, is looking for every possible way to ease cold war tensions.

This country, he added, welcomes any constructive step in that direction. The President said the agreement on a plan to detect tests of nuclear weapons might be signed tomorrow. It was reached after seven weeks of negotiations by scientists of the Soviet bloc and the Western Allies.

On a related question, Mr. Eisenhower said he thought it would be possible to come to an understanding on stopping nuclear tests without the participation of Red China.

There could be a pact among only the countries which signed the agreement, he declared. Other nations, Mexico, for example, could be excluded, he said. He added that there would have to be confidence that the agreement would not be abused.

Avoids Guess on Mao.
Mr. Eisenhower said also he had seen no evidence that Mao Tse-tung, the Communist leader, has been dictating the policy of the Communist nations regarding a summit conference.

He did say there had been reports of denials in Moscow that Mao was calling the shots on a summit meeting but that he would hesitate to make a real guess.

Mr. Eisenhower, a former five-star general, spoke out with considerable emphasis when a woman reporter asked him whether he thought this country's defenses were adequate.

After saying he considered them completely adequate, he added that every day there are new inventions, new developments, new enlargements that constantly make them even more powerful.

Indeed, in certain areas he would say that we are spending too much money, Mr. Eisenhower asserted. He did not say.

EISENHOWER SAYS ALL OUGHT TO OBEY COURTSAmericans Have Solemn Duty to Comply,
He Asserts in Warning to Opponents of Integration.

By GEORGE H. HALL

A Washington Correspondent
of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20—President Eisenhower warned opponents of school integration today that all Americans have a solemn duty to "comply with the final orders of the court."

With obvious reference to approaching crises in Little Rock and in other areas where the intention of evading the Supreme Court anti-segregation ruling has been manifest, the President said:

"Every American must understand that if an individual, community or state is going successfully and continuously to defy the courts, then there is anarchy."

Mr. Eisenhower said each state had the obligation of maintaining order to allow compliance with the court's directives, but he said "there can be no equivocation as to the responsibility of the Federal Government" if any state failed in its duty.

The President took to his news conference a statement on the integration question. He read it in a firm voice, and when he had finished he removed his glasses and said he would have nothing further to say on the subject.

The text of his statement follows:

"Because there are still some phases of this case pending in the courts, it would not be appropriate for me to express my view on the case itself."

"This case, however, or any person's agreement or disagreement with its outcome, must not be confused with the solemn duty that all Americans have to comply with the final orders of the court. Nor should we lose sight of the fact that the maintenance of order to permit compliance with the final orders of the court is the

CONTINUED warm weather, with a possibility of rain over the weekend, was predicted by the Weather Bureau in its five-day forecast issued today.

The forecast is: Temperatures for the five-day period from tomorrow through Monday will remain rather warm and average near or slightly below the seasonal normal; normal highs are 86 to 87, normal lows 66 to 67; precipitation may occur in the form of thunder showers about Friday and again late Saturday or Sunday.

STUDENTS TO BUY
$1 BADGE AND PAY
15C FARES SEPT. 4

Elementary and high school students who ride Public Service Co. buses and streetcars to and from school will find higher fares and a new badge system of identification when they resume classes Sept. 4, the company announced today.

Costing $1 a semester, the badges will be sold at the schools. Each ride for a badge holder will cost 15 cents plus higher fares, applicable to the student fare restricted to the hours from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. on regular school days.

The badges, which are yellow for boys and yellow with a red stripe for girls, must be higher than the student's head and will be forfeited if cut or mutilated by the holder. Lost badges may be replaced on payment of $2. They are not transferable, and are issued only to students filling out an application.

Authorized by the Missouri Public Service Commission last June, the new student fare replaces a pass for a week. No further fare was paid during school hours but the pass card could be used outside of school hours on payment of 10 cents a ride.

PRESIDENT URGES CONGRESS TO ACT
ON LABOR REFORM

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—President Eisenhower today prodded Congress to act before adjournment on legislation to curb racketeering, corruption, and power abuses in the labor-management field.

In a statement, he called for action on a reform program which he submitted to Congress last Jan. 23. At the same time, the President took a swipe at the Senate-passed Kennedy-Ives bill killed by the House earlier this week.

He said the Kennedy-Ives measure "did not meet the nation's needs because it did not deal effectively with many of the evils which need correction."

The President noted that the House action on the bill sponsored by Senators John F. Kennedy (Dem.), Massachusetts, and Irving M. Ives (Rep.), New York, was "under a procedure which permitted no opportunity to amend it and thus to correct its deficiencies."

Mr. Eisenhower said he still is hopeful that Congress, pressing for adjournment perhaps this weekend, will pass a labor bill before it closes up shop.

Women Lawyers to Take a Vote
On Giving Equal Rights to Men

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 20 (UPI)—Equal rights for men has been proposed in a resolution framed for presentation tomorrow for action by the International Federation of Women Lawyers.

The proposal, drafted by Rosalind Batters of California, called for the same hours and working conditions for men and women employees.

"Our men are being killed off much too young," she said. "About half of the women at this convention are widows. We must begin to protect the health of our men through things like rest periods, number of work hours and health conditions."

"Women in California live on the average about eight years longer than men," the attorney said, while elsewhere in the United States the difference is about four years.

SENATE KILLS

Tabled After Hot
Debate — Earlier Measure Limiting Justices Approved.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—The Senate today killed a bill to curb the review powers of the Supreme Court and to undo the effects of its decisions in several Communist cases.

Defeat of the bill came amid the hottest congressional controversy over Supreme Court decisions since the days of the New Deal when the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt proposed his court-packing plan.

The measure, proposed by Senators William E. Jenner (Rep.), Indiana, and John M. Butler (Rep.), Maryland, was the most far-reaching of the numerous bills aimed at recent rulings of the court.

It was killed with the adoption of a motion by Senator Thomas C. Hennings (Dem.), Missouri, to table it. The bill had been offered as an amendment to a minor measure relating to appeals from rulings of federal administrative agencies.

The vote to table the bill was 49 to 41.

Attack by Jenner.
Jenner opened debate on the measure with an assertion that the Supreme Court has handed down decisions "usurping legislative functions and destroying the internal security of the country."

He added it is "a runaway wild cart" tearing down the constitution.

Butler, following Jenner in the fast-moving debate, accused the Supreme Court Justices of judicial legislation and of invading the rights of the states.

But Hennings denounced it as an attempt to impose the will of Congress on the court "in complete violation of the spirit of our Constitution."

Hennings said the bill was reminiscent of Roosevelt's attempt to pack the court after it struck down New Deal legislation.

Meanwhile, the House continued debate on mineral subsidies legislation.

Work Ahead Is Cited.
Senate Democratic majority leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas listed a dozen matters for Senate action before Congress adjourns. The heavy schedule complicated hopes of any members of Congress to leave Washington by the weekend.

Johnson noted that the Senate has not even begun floor action on four bills—the controversial foreign aid funds, an increase in the national debt, an extension of the defense contract renegotiation authority, and a disputed increase in retirement benefits for railroad workers.

About 30 bills still were before Senate-House conference committees seeking to iron out differences.

Among these, Johnson said action is required on the federal aid to education plan, a $3,500,000 farm surplus disposal measure, a rivers and flood control funds bill, and a highway construction appropriation.

He also listed for action the independent offices appropriations bill which President Eisenhower vetoed.

Court Bill Passed.
The Jenner-Butler bill after passing 65 to 12 last night a measure to lessen the effect of another Supreme Court ruling—one dealing with the arraignment of persons arrested by police.

The Court last year overturned a rape conviction because the defendant was held by police 7 1/2 hours before being arraigned.

MOON FLIGHTS
BY MAN FORESEEN
WITHIN 5 YEARS

PALO ALTO, Calif., Aug. 20 (AP)—Within five years the United States should send a man in a sealed cabin on an 80-hour journey around the moon and back to earth, two Martin Co. space planners said yesterday.

They then Soviet Russia may have landed men on the moon, said Dandridge M. Cole and Donald E. Muir in a paper before an American Astronautical Society regional meeting at Stanford University.

Cole and Muir, engineers in Martin's advance planning department at Denver, said solutions to the major problems involved in a manned flight around the moon already are understood in principle.

Cole and Muir said they projected an 80-hour flight around the moon and back as a good compromise between safety for the moon ship's passenger and lowest possible cost.

They estimated 35.35 hours to reach the moon, 9.3 hours to fly around it and 35.35 for the flight back to earth.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Aug. 20—A new compromise shaped up here today that promised to bring a quick end to the special emergency session of the United Nations General Assembly as the Arab states involved in the present crisis agreed tentatively on a formula for resolving the situation.

Iraq, Lebanon, Jordan and the United Arab Republic reached provisional agreement on a resolution that would put responsibility on the Arab League for maintaining order in the area.

It includes in the last section moderate language calling on Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld to take action which would "facilitate the departure of troops from Lebanon and Jordan."

The British already have indicated that they would accept the Arab compromise.

Dulles Goes to Washington.
Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, who has been directing the fight for the Western-backed resolution initiated by Norway, left suddenly for Washington this afternoon. It was believed one reason for his trip was to consult with President Eisenhower to get approval of such a resolution.

The new proposal likely would satisfy all but the Communist bloc and might even gain their vote, too.

The Asian-African bloc at a meeting this afternoon agreed to postpone any further action on a possible resolution by India or amendments to the Norwegian resolution in the hope that accord can be reached on what the Arab states have accepted.

Some members of the American delegation were hinting today that a further compromise would be possible with reference to withdrawal of United States and British troops that would not imply a condemnation of the action taken by the two countries in sending forces to Lebanon and Jordan.

It was not certain that Dulles himself would go along with this latest move to solve the situation. But he is anxious, as is almost everyone else here, to bring an end to the Assembly meeting.

If the Arab unite Arabs, it is an all probability win the support of the entire Asian-African group, heretofore divided on the problem. With the nations immediately involved coming together to assure a peaceful settlement they could not well be in opposition to the efforts of the Arab delegate Rihth Lall to work out an India-sponsored compromise.

United Press International said reliable informants reported that the Arab plan was based on a policy pronounced by United Arab Republic Foreign Minister Mahmoud Fawzi which declared that:

(1) All Middle Eastern countries agree to respect each other's territorial integrity and political independence.

(2) All agree that foreign troops are not wanted on the soil of any country.

(3) No move will be made to condemn any country for its past action—notably the dispatch of American and British troops to the area.

(4) The need for a "U.N. presence" in some form—commission, observers, or perhaps a peace force—is required in some countries of the Middle East.

French Renew Summit Plea.
At this morning Assembly meeting, French Foreign Minister Maurice Couvre de Murville supported the Western-backed resolution and told the delegates that a summit conference of the big powers in co-operation with the Middle East nations could settle the outstanding issues.

A similar suggestion had come earlier today from the delegate of Ceylon, one of the leaders in an effort to water down or supplant the Western-supported compromise resolution.

Couvre de Murville did not go so far as to call for such a conference but he recalled that France had accepted the

Prevue Doorman,
Said to Owe $662.

The current grand jury investigation of the business affairs of Frank (Buster) Wortman, East Side rackets boss, resulted yesterday in the indictment of Joseph W. Janko, a minor employee of Wortman, by the federal grand jury in St. Louis.

Janko, who served as a porter and doorman at Club Prevue, restaurant and gambling casino formerly operated by Wortman and associates on East Side, was charged with evading a total of $662 in federal income taxes during the years 1954 through 1956.

Assistant United States Attorney Frederick Mayer said Janko took illegal deductions for two minor children whom he had not supported. Mayer said the children were supported solely by Janko's divorced wife.

Janko, a former convict, was among the Wortman associates who appeared on the payroll of the Stephen Gorman Bricklaying Co. on two public housing projects in St. Louis in 1955 and 1956.

Sentenced Man Indicted.
Another indictment named Arthur Eugene Schaefer, already under four-years sentence for using the mails to defraud in connection with a razor blade vending scheme as fraudulently using the mails in another business scheme.

The indictment in 13 counts supersedes an earlier true bill returned last January. It charges Schaefer with fraudulently promoting the sale of sporting goods businesses and phonograph records, and with promising to supply the purchasers of these businesses with merchandise.

Eugene G. McKnight, 6100 block of Colorado avenue, was accused in another indictment.

HIS CRIME? FELL IN RIVER

RICHMOND, England, Aug. 20 (UPI)—A small and very wet boy squished into a police station here last night took a deep breath, and bravely announced:

"I have just fallen in the river and decided to give myself up."

A police sergeant explained to 10-year-old Tony Williams it was not a crime to fall into the river, wrapped him in a blanket and took him home.

14 Russians, Just Plain Folks,
Begin U.S. Tour—at $1145 Each

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (UPI)—Thirteen men and a woman arrived here today as the first "ordinary" tourists from Communist Russia ever to visit the United States.

Unlike the scientists, athletes, diplomats, farmers, students and ballet dancers who have come here in official parties in the past, today's arrivals paid their own money—$1145 each, tips included—to see America.

The woman in the party, Mrs. Anna S. Butenko, an architect, told reporters at Idlewild airport that the trip is costing her $500 rubles, that she paid for it out of her own money.

Asked if she would do some shopping during the three days the party will stay in New York before they go on a tour of Washington, Chicago and Niagara Falls, she replied:

"Probably. After all, I am also a woman."

MISSING MONEYShouts 'Absolutely Not'
When Asked at Senate Hearing Whether

Any of It.By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent
of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20—Robert (Barney) Baker, Teamster Union troubleshooter, loudly denied any knowledge of the missing Greenlease ransom money today before the Senate Labor Rackets Investigating Committee.

He contradicted his former wife, Mrs. Mollie Baker, 1223 Eastover avenue, University City, Mo., who yesterday told the committee that he told her that Joseph Costello, ex-convict head of the Ace Cab Co., of St. Louis, had the money.

The 300-pound, former heavyweight boxer, denounced his former wife as a "vengeful woman, a woman scorned."

He said the story she told of having come from him was a "figment of her imagination."

He denied angrily that he ever told her to "tip Joe off" if she was ever questioned about the Greenlease case.

Denies Plan to Hide Him.
Robert F. Kennedy, committee counsel, called attention to Mrs. Baker's testimony, in which she said Baker told her that if he ever got into trouble the Teamsters would hide him out in a hospital and announce that he had gone in to lose some weight.

Baker denied this. Kennedy then noted that the $303,720 in ransom money disappeared in St. Louis Oct. 6, 1953, and that Baker entered the Battle Creek Sanitarium, Battle Creek, Mich., on Oct. 8, 1953.

"You knew then, didn't you that the Greenlease money was missing and that Costello was being mentioned in that connection?" Kennedy asked.

"Everybody was being laid out in the papers at that time," Baker replied.

Baker, in response to questions, said he entered the hospital himself to lose some weight, because "I'm a big man." He said he did not go there because of the missing ransom.

Asked if he handled any of the missing money, Baker shouted: "Absolutely not."

"Blood-Tainted Money."
Kennedy said to the witness, "You are associated with every gangster in the United States, so it is not so shocking that you might have some connection with the ransom money."

Baker replied: "It is shocking. That was blood-tainted money. I don't go for that kind of action."

Carmine Bellino, an accountant and committee investigator, was called to the stand. He introduced records showing Baker was in the sanatorium from Oct. 8 to 30. Bills for his stay amounted to $893, which was paid by Teamsters Joint Council 43 of Detroit. At that time, James R. Hoffa, now general president of the International union, was Council 43's president.

Among the bills were such items as sunbaths, massages, tips, tray service and $322 for telephone calls, Bellino said.

$1000 Pay-Off Traced.
Late today, Senate investigators were attempting to nail down evidence purporting to show that Baker accepted a $1000 pay-off from a trucking concern for his efforts in ending a strike.

Kennedy told the Senators he had had a telephone conversation with an officer of the Esco Motor Exhibitors Service of McKee Rocks, a suburb of Pittsburgh, who told him he sent the money in three envelopes to E. J. Weinheimer, a labor representative for the trucking firm, and that Weinheimer delivered it to Baker.

Baker and Weinheimer were at the Rambler Motel, near Des Moines, Ia., at the time, August 1957, Kennedy said. Mrs. Virgil Smith, who with her husband operates the motel, testified that Baker paid his motel bill of $10 with a $100 bill which he took from a white envelope in her presence.

Her husband testified that Weinheimer had told him he was expecting the three envelopes by mail. Smith said they arrived special delivery and were given to Weinheimer. They were "quite bulky," Smith said.

Baker, recalled to the stand, said he could not remember how he paid his motel bill, but later said, "I may have had

FAUBUS MEETING SCHOOL BOARD FOR DISCUSSION OF INTEGRATION

Arkansas Governor to Take Legislative Leaders to Conference Tonight in Little Rock.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 20 (AP)—Gov. Orval Faubus and three Arkansas legislative leaders will meet with the Little Rock School Board at 7 p.m. today to discuss the integration problem.

Faubus indicated that unless the board took some action quickly to forestall the return of Negro students to Central High School Sept. 2, the Legislature probably would be called into special session next week.

The meeting with the school board was set up in a conversation between Superintendent of Schools Virgil Blossom and the Governor, who have publicly criticized each other.

Faubus said he would be flanked at the meeting by Lt. Gov. Nathan Gordon, president of the State Senate; Representative Glen F. Walther, speaker of the House; and Senator Lee Bearden, president of the Senate.

Blossom's invitation. He said Blossom had asked him if he would like to meet with the board and discuss the school situation and Faubus had replied he would meet with it if you were anything you want to tell me.

A coolness between the board and the Governor has been apparent since last fall when Blossom blamed Faubus for much of the Central high trouble.

They decided to meet privately and issue a statement to the press following the meeting.

Faubus still refused to be pinned down on an expected special session of the Legislature but did say that "only action of the school board can prevent a special session and time is getting short."

School Board Plans. The school board said last night it planned to ask the United States Supreme Court to intervene in the Little Rock case and would ask the Eighth Circuit United States Court of Appeals at St. Louis to stay its decision which ruled out a 2½-year delay in integration.

If the high court, now in summer recess, approved the writ, an extraordinary session would be called to hear the case. The court is not scheduled to reconvene in regular session until October.

An extraordinary session would keep the Circuit Court of Appeals from taking effect until the Supreme Court ruled, in effect staying the lower court's order.

Before last night's board meeting—attended by Blossom, four of the six board members and two attorneys—Faubus had put pressure on the board to say whether it would make a real fight to resist integration.

What Board Could Do. The Governor said his future actions depended on what the school board did.

Faubus said the board could use a 1956 state pupil assignment law to keep Negroes out of white schools, or it could persuade Negro students to stay out voluntarily. The pupil assignment law has never been tried.

If these two things failed, Faubus said, the board could resign and allow the people to select a new board which would have the courage to act in conformity to their wishes.

Faubus issued his suggestions at a press conference yesterday. He also demanded that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People say what its plans are for the coming school term.

Parents of five of the eight Negro students who completed the year at Central High School last June declined last night to say whether their children would return next month. The father of one 15-year-old Jefferson Thomas, said he would leave the decision up to his son, now at summer camp.

One of the eight, Ernest Green, was graduated. Parents of the other two were not available for comment.

The initial integration at Central High last fall was resisted by Faubus with National Guard troops until a federal court ordered him to cease interference. Nine Negroes then entered the 2,000-pupil high school and riots resulted. President Eisenhower sent federal troops to Little Rock to back up the court's integration order.

Blossom said there had been no new applications from Negroes for this term.

In reply to Faubus's demand that the N.A.A.C.P. say what its position will be regarding the new term of school, Mrs. L. C. Bates, president of the Arkansas N.A.A.C.P., said, "When the school board calls us we will listen to their plan; then we will decide what to do."

She declined to say whether integration of other Little Rock schools in addition to Central High School would be sought.

Editorial Reaction. Disappointment pervaded the first editorial reaction by Arkansas newspapers to the appellate court's decision. The Arkansas Gazette, which has opposed Gov. Faubus's actions in the Central High School dispute, said Monday's ruling "came as a disappointment—if not a surprise—to the overwhelming majority of Arkansas citizens, the editors of this newspaper included."

Said the Arkansas Democrat:

Commenting on Integration Decision

VIRGIL BLOSSOM (left), superintendent of Little Rock schools, and GOV. ORVAL FAUBUS of Arkansas issuing statements yesterday on Monday's integration ruling by Eighth Circuit United States Court of Appeals.

"In a sense, we are back where we were last fall. . . . The decision again leaves Little Rock bearing the brunt of this painful situation. . . . It calls for cool thinking to find every possible recourse in legal procedure."

The Democrat said Congress could help the situation and the South should get set to make demands there before the current session adjourns.

Affirmation of Judge Lemley's ruling for a suspension of integration, the Gazette said, "would have shifted the focus of this fall's integration difficulties away from Arkansas and back to Virginia, where experts on the South's 'massive resistance' strategy say it was supposed to have remained all along."

"All that was changed last September when Gov. Faubus elected to make Little Rock the focal point of conflict. Failing a stay of the Circuit Court's ruling, Little Rock and Arkansas next month will share the national headlines with Virginia and other 'showdown' areas of the South."

'Geography of Judges.' The Harrison Daily Times said the appellate court's decision had been expected because of the "geography of the judges," none of whom was from the South. The Times added:

"Gov. Faubus has appealed the Negroes to let up on their fight for integration but there is little chance that they will relent in their efforts. . . . 'Give in to integration? That alternative is not even considered in Arkansas. With the 'Virginia crisis due in the immediate future, school closings are expected to become frequent. This is a possible step in Arkansas, too. Private schools may be expected to flourish again in the South.'"

The Hot Springs Sentinel Record said Faubus's "tone of moderation over the United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruling in the Central High integration case at least offers hope that Arkansas will not see a repetition of the disastrous and unhappy events set off last September."

The paper added: "With the election heat off and a third term assured, Mr. Faubus may feel that it is no longer necessary for him to be the firebrand who had led the segregationists' torch parade since last September."

WON'T RUN FOR PRESIDENT, STEVENSON SAYS AGAIN

FLORENCE, Italy, Aug. 20 (UPI)—Adlai Stevenson said today he hoped to participate "for a long time" in political life, but repeated that he would "not be a future Democratic candidate for President."

The former Democratic presidential candidate arrived here yesterday on a short vacation visit after a tour of Russia and eastern Europe.

Stevenson said he was sure his experiences behind the Iron Curtain "will help me to work for the benefit of my country."

"I found the men in Russia learned, and I am convinced that the people of that country want peace," he said. "At the present moment Khrushchev is an undisputed dictator, however."

DUKE QUITS HUMANE SOCIETY WHEN IT BANS STAG HUNTING

LONDON, Aug. 20 (AP)—The Duke of Devonshire has resigned from the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. He's a hunting, shooting and fishing man at heart.

The 38-year-old duke quit the presidency of the society's Chesterfield branch when he learned of its campaign now under way to outlaw stag-hunting—a sport of which he approves.

Said Secretary Annie Grundy of the Chesterfield branch: "Of course, many titled people are very fond of hunting. But we consider it a cruel sport against all our principles."

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 20 (UPI)—Gov. Orval E. Faubus's son, Farrell, said today he would transfer from an integrated college to a segregated university this fall.

The 19-year-old sophomore said that "I've been away from the folks for a few years" and transferring from Russellville (Ark.) Tech to Little Rock University would enable him to see his parents more often.

Farrell said his changing to the segregated school had nothing to do with the current integration crisis in Little Rock.

CANADA MOVES TO CREATE NEW RADIO, TV NETWORKS

OTTAWA, Aug. 20 (UPI)—Legislation introduced yesterday in the House of Commons would allow the creation of radio and television networks to compete with the Canadian Broadcasting Corp.

The legislation would end the controversial dual role of the present CBC board of governors by creating two new boards—one to regulate Canadian broadcasting and the other to run the CBC.

The former, to be known as the Board of Broadcasting Governors, will be given the power to license private radio and television networks.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—New Soviet demands for an immediate bar on nuclear tests appeared likely today as a follow-up to tentative East-West agreements on a technical system to detect cheating.

The agreement yesterday on means of setting up a global monitoring network came in seven weeks of secret talks now drawing to an end in Geneva.

There was no effort by the 16 scientists from four Western and four Communist nations to reach any political decisions on whether there should be an agreement to halt nuclear testing.

Demand Anticipated. However, American officials said the Kremlin can be expected to point to the Geneva agreement as committing the United States to end tests. This interpretation has been rejected in advance by President Eisenhower.

The American position, as set forth in the past by Mr. Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, is that any agreement by East-West scientists might lead to suspension of testing, but that the United States refused to be bound in advance.

Pending a final report by scientists of both sides, State Department officials cautiously refused to appraise the significance of the Geneva agreement on a possible control system. Details of the agreement were not disclosed.

Authorities said additional months of diplomatic talks would be needed to put into effect recommendations agreed to by the scientists.

Some officials said they understood the key point in the agreement was a decision to recommend that nearly 200 monitoring stations be set up around the world. These could be on land, on ships at sea. They would be equipped with electronic and other methods of recording any blasts.

Unsolved Questions. Questions remaining to be solved included such as these: Who would finance any global network of monitoring stations?

2. Would the United Nations sponsor the network or would stations be operated by a picked group of scientific experts drawn from individual nations?

3. How much freedom would inspectors have to make on the spot investigations?

While the scientists met in Switzerland, the United States has been conducting a series of nuclear tests in the Pacific.

Britain is preparing for a new series of its own, also in the Pacific. Russia announced a halt in its own tests last March after finishing a series.

Congress Happy---Rickover Will Greet Nautilus, Get Promotion

President Names Him for Ceremony Monday—Gates Indicates Admiral Will Receive Three Stars.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (UPI)—Congress expressed pleasure today at President Eisenhower's designation of R. Adm. Hyman G. Rickover to be his personal representative at the nuclear submarine Nautilus's homecoming and at the Navy Secretary's pledge that the admiral will get his third star.

Senator Henry M. Jackson (Dem.), Washington, chairman of the congressional Atomic Energy Committee's weapons subcommittee, said: "I'm happy to learn that the Navy now recognizes that it will be possible to promote Adm. Rickover to vice admiral. I earnestly hope that the Navy will not long delay this move."

Senator Clinton P. Anderson (Dem.), New Mexico, vice chairman of the Atomic Energy Committee, said he was "very pleased by the President's extremely generous recognition of Adm. Rickover on the occasion of the return of the Nautilus."

"I hope the Navy continues that recognition by making possible his appointment as vice admiral," said Anderson, referring to a statement by Navy Secretary Thomas S. Gates.

"Will Take Little While." The Navy yesterday confirmed a Newsweek magazine interview in which Gates said he was sure he could promote Rickover, a frequent Navy storm center, to the three-star rank of vice admiral. He said it "will take a little while."

(The Associated Press pointed out that long-standing Navy policy, which sets up specific billets for three- and four-star rank and then looks for officers to fill these billets, has been a minor stumbling block in promoting Rickover.)

(Among his other title, Rickover is an assistant chief of the Bureau of Ships. His immediate superior, the chief of the bureau, is only a rear admiral. Navy protocol forbids on giving a higher rank to an assistant.

U.S. AGAIN SENDS ARMS TO IRAQ, TRAINS POLICE

Spare Parts Shipped—
to Be Sent, However.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20—The United States quietly resumed shipments of military equipment to the new revolutionary government of Iraq, it was learned yesterday.

This country recently delivered to Iraq two shipments of spare parts for military equipment given that nation earlier under a 1954 defense aid agreement, informed sources said. Shipments of military aid supplies were suspended when an Iraqi army clique assassinated King Faisal and Premier Nuri Said and set up a new government in Baghdad on July 14.

The United States does not intend at this time to send the new Iraq regime any major weapons, informants said. This country had delivered five F-86 jets to Iraq just before the July 14 coup and had intended to increase that number several fold.

In another move indicating improving relations with Iraq's new rulers, this country has resumed a police training program there and handed over to Baghdad a shipment of police equipment promised as part of a $1,600,000 police program launched in 1957 under a technical aid agreement with the former government.

The United States last year sent two specialists to Iraq to train policemen and agreed to give Baghdad sizeable lots of fingerprinting and communications equipment, vehicles and small arms. Shipment of this material were not halted after the July 14 coup, but the training program was disrupted briefly.

The United States military aid program for Iraq never was large, amounting to about $45,000,000 between 1954 and July 14 this year. Most of the American equipment promised to Iraq under the 1954 agreement had been delivered before the coup. It consisted mostly of military trucks and trailers, light tanks, communications and electronic equipment.

HOUSING BILL'S DEFEAT LIKELY TO DELAY CITY'S TANDY PROJECT

Money for Northside Program Depended on Its Passage—Mill Creek, Other Work Here Not Affected.

Plans for rehabilitating the Tandy area of north St. Louis "probably will be delayed" as a result of the defeat of a $975,000,000 housing bill in Congress, the Post-Dispatch was told today.

At the same time, Mayor Raymond R. Tucker, calling the defeat "regrettable," urged action next year by municipal officials and members of Congress on behalf of a housing program adequate to meet our city's needs.

The housing bill, which would have financed additional slum clearance, housing for the elderly and more college classrooms and dormitories, failed by a vote of 251 to 134 in the House of Representatives Monday. The margin was six votes short of the two-thirds majority required under a suspension of rules by which the bill was brought to the floor of the House.

Hinged on Bill's Passage. James Drought, deputy director of the St. Louis Land Clearance and Housing Authority, said the agency had been told "informally" that approval of a pending application for a federal loan of $631,700 for the Tandy development was dependent upon approval of the housing bill.

The application was for funds to finance preparation of plans for the Tandy project, Drought added. He explained that even preliminary plans for the project have not been drafted.

The Tandy district consists of 825 acres of land with 9500 dwellings housing 35,000 persons living in an area bounded by Easton and North Bridge avenues, Kingshighway and Whittier street.

In addition to the Tandy project, Drought indicated defeat of the housing bill would delay any other urban renewal project the land clearance agency might contemplate but for which federal funds have not already been allocated.

Defeat of the bill, he said, would have no effect on the Mill Creek Valley, Plaza or Kosciusko urban renewal projects. Federal funds already have been allocated for these three developments, all of which are further advanced than the Tandy project.

Other Projects Not Affected. Construction of the second phases of the Joseph M. Darst and George L. Vaughn apartments will not be affected by the Congressional action, either, Drought stated. Funds already have been allocated for these projects, he added. Construction bids for the second phase of both projects are expected to be let soon, he said.

Mayor Tucker, noting that the housing bill failed by only a slight margin to win the required two-thirds majority, said the outcome "demonstrated conclusively that the urban renewal and slum clearance programs have the support of a clear majority of the Congress."

It is therefore doubly regrettable that a two-thirds vote was necessary if this housing legislation was to be brought out of its Rules Committee pigeon hole.

Tucker was one of a group of seven mayors of big cities who went to Washington last week in an effort to win favorable House action on the controversial bill.

CAB FIRMS STUDY GIBBONS PLAN FOR SINGLE CONTRACT

A proposal for a single contract between union employees and managements of the four larger taxicab companies in St. Louis was under study today by management representatives.

The proposal was made by Harold J. Gibbons of St. Louis, Teamsters' International vice president, after he was summoned this week to attend deadlocked contract negotiations between representatives of Local 405, Taxicab Drivers' Union and Laclede Cab Co.

Besides Laclede, the proposed contract would include Yellow, Black & White and Ace Cab companies. Employees will meet to consider the proposal if managements agree to it, a union spokesman said.

DRIVER IS HURLED FROM AUTO, CHILD ESCAPES INJURY

Six-year-old Sandra Ludwig of 6301 Audrey avenue, Wellston, escaped injury yesterday after the automobile in which she was riding collided with a truck and rolled nearly 200 feet without a driver before stopping against a dirt embankment.

Sandra's mother, Mrs. Violet Ludwig, 36, who was driving, was hurled from the car by the impact. She suffered loss of her left arm as a result of her injuries and was reported in serious condition at St. Louis County Hospital.

Trooper Paul Updegraff of the State Highway Patrol reported Mrs. Ludwig swerved her machine to avoid crashing into another northbound vehicle that stopped ahead of her on Lindbergh boulevard south of Page avenue in St. Louis county.

Mrs. Ludwig's automobile collided with a southbound concrete-mixing truck driven by Howard Kamm of Granite City. Spun around, the car rolled south in Lindbergh for 96 feet and then continued on a private drive before coming to a halt. Sandra was asleep at the time of the collision.

ONCE-CONVICTED DRIVER ARRESTED IN POLICE CHASE

Paul E. Belleville, who was sentenced to four years at Alcoa Reformatory in 1953 after the stolen automobile he was driving struck and killed a pedestrian, was charged with five traffic violations following a police chase early today.

Patrolman John Long, riding in a one-man car, reported he saw Belleville's northbound machine pass through a stop sign at California avenue and Chippewa street and pursued it. Belleville drove to Iowa avenue, where he turned south, and reached speeds up to 75 miles an hour, passing through two more stop signs.

The chase ended when Belleville lost control of his machine and drove 40 feet into Laclede Park, at Iowa and Montana avenues. He was charged with having no driver's license, violating three stop signs, careless driving by speed and destruction of city park property.

In December of 1952, Belleville, now 24 years old and living in the 3500 block of Illinois avenue, stole an automobile and took three companions for a wild ride. At Pennsylvania avenue and Upton street he struck and killed Charles P. Nichols, father of six, small children. He said he was driving "about 60" when he hit Nichols.

PARKING TO BE BARRED UNTIL 10 A.M. SATURDAY

Prohibition of parking on downtown streets until 10 a.m. on Saturdays will be tried in a move to conserve 735 curb spaces for shoppers, Director of Streets Henry S. Miller said today.

The restriction against parking on these streets was lifted last Saturday to encourage downtown shopping, but by the time the stores opened there was no room for shoppers. Automobiles of persons employed downtown had taken up all the available spaces before 8 a.m. and occupied them all day.

Miller said the traffic division was hopeful that necessary sign changes could be made by the end of this week so that the new regulations could be made effective this Saturday.

COUNTY RECREATION PROGRAM TO EXPAND

At Least 5 More Parks to Be Ready Next Summer, Skow Says.

Children in St. Louis county will be offered expanded recreational facilities next summer, including "at least" five more parks, Charles R. Skow, county park commissioner, said today.

Funds for the additional parks were included in a $2,200,000 bond issue approved by county voters in 1955. Expansion of the summer recreation program is planned as a result of success achieved in the first year of operation, ending today, Skow stated.

About 1500 children attended a "Grand Roundup" today at Creve Coeur Lake Memorial Park. Dressed in western outfits, they competed for prizes in fishing and costume contests.

In a simulated "gold rush," children searched for nuggets containing lucky numbers, prizes and bus transportation were provided by the Clayton Lions Club.

A total of 2670 children took part in sports, arts and crafts programs presented by the county Department of Parks and Recreation this season, Skow reported. The activities were open to youngsters between the ages of 6 and 15.

Among new activities tentatively planned for next year is an overnight camping program, Skow said.

MRS. WULFFING 4 MERGER PLANS HEADS COUNTY G.O.P. COMMITTEE CONSIDERED FOR COUNTY SCHOOLS

First Woman to Hold Post — Devereaux Is Re-elected by Democrats.

Mrs. Peter Wulffing, committeewoman of Clayton Township, was unanimously elected chairman of the St. Louis County Republican Central Committee yesterday. She is the first woman ever to hold the chairmanship of either major party's central committee in the county.

Ralph L. Devereaux easily won re-election to a fourth term as chairman of the County Democratic Central Committee at an organizational meeting last night. He defeated his sole opponent, State Representative Robert A. Young, committeeman of Airport Township, by a vote of 24 to 8.

Selection of Mrs. Wulffing, a comparative newcomer to politics, as head of the Republican organization in the county was looked on by political observers as an indication that the "old guard" faction of the G.O.P., which has controlled party affairs in the county for many years, is ready to close ranks with the younger, more progressive Republican elements in an effort to stave off the Democratic threat in the Nov. 4 general election.

First Office in 1956. Mrs. Wulffing, a former president of the Clayton League of Women Voters, was first elected committeewoman of Clayton Township in 1956. She was re-elected to that post last Aug. 5 primary election, defeating an incumbent, Mrs. Jola Butler, in a heated contest.

At the Republican committee's organizational meeting yesterday, former Committee Chairman Norman C. Parker, of Airport Township, was nominated along with Mrs. Wulffing for the post of chairman. Parker, however, withdrew after the nominations were closed, leaving Mrs. Wulffing unopposed.

She succeeds John J. McAtee, who was defeated for re-election as Republican committeeman of Gravois township at the primary election.

Mrs. Wulffing said she plans to set up a finance committee immediately and plan for the fall campaign. Mrs. Wulffing lives at 3222 Brentwood park, Clayton. Her husband is president of St. Louis Gear Co.

Other Republican committee officers named, all of whom were elected without opposition, are: Edwin F. Vieth of St. Ferdinand Township, vice chairman; Mrs. Toletia Whitaker of Meramec Township, secretary; John Brunner of Gravois Township, who defeated McAtee, treasurer, and Frank Bild of Concord Township, sergeant-at-arms.

Devereaux, who is supervisor of the sales and cigarette tax divisions of the State Department of Revenue in the county, has been Democratic committeeman of Lemay Township since 1944 and chairman of the central committee since 1952.

In a statement issued following his re-election as chairman, he promised "an aggressive campaign" to assure Democratic victory in November. "This will not be an easy campaign," Devereaux said. "Anyone who thinks so is mistaken. The Republican machine is not going to give up what they have had as a sure thing for so long without a real struggle."

Other officers of the Democratic Central Committee named at the organizational meeting are: Mrs. Helen M. Burke of Midland Township, re-elected vice chairman; George W. Cloyd of Clayton Township, treasurer; Mrs. Beatrice K. Schwartz of Hadley Township, secretary, and Paul J. Spica of Normandy Township, sergeant-at-arms.

Forming of One, Five or Eight or Nine Districts Being Studied by Board.

Four principal plans for consolidating school districts in St. Louis county are under consideration by the county Board of Education, the Post-Dispatch was told today.

The plans include elimination of a number of small districts and three alternative proposals for consolidation of all county districts to form either one, five or "about eight or nine" districts, Paul A. Leupold, president of the board, said.

"We are weighing the relative merits of these plans," he said. "Our recommendation probably will be selected from among them."

The board has been studying since last spring various proposals for reorganizing the county's 29 school districts but has not announced any decisions. Any proposal it may make is subject to approval by the State Board of Education and voters.

Plans for Northern Area. In addition to the four principal plans now under study, Leupold said at a meeting of the board last night that consideration would be given to a proposal for consolidating six districts in the northern part of the county into one district.

Representatives of the R-2 (Ferguson-Florissant) School District appeared before the board to urge approval of the move. The board later held an executive session to discuss reorganization plans.

Under the proposal for elimination of small districts, Leupold said, four districts each with enrollments of less than 1500 pupils—Valley Park, West Walnut Manor, Maryland Heights and Kinloch—would be amalgamated with larger nearby districts. Two districts that do not operate high schools—Scudder and Jefferson Parkers—also would be eliminated.

Chief advocate of the five-district plan has been Edgar C. Miller, assistant principal of Fairview High School in Jennings. Elimination of small districts was proposed by the Metropolitan St. Louis Survey last year.

Rejected Last Spring. Leupold said last spring that the board had rejected a one-district plan and was no longer considering a proposal similar to that advocated by Miller.

Election Oct. 14 on $4,100,000 Gravois Creek Sewer Bonds

Approval by Two Thirds Voting Is Required—40-Cent Tax Rise Indicated—Two-Year Project.

An election will be held Oct. 14 on a proposed bond issue of $4,100,000, for construction of a 12.7-mile sanitary trunk sewer in the Gravois creek watershed in St. Louis county.

In making the announcement today, William Q. Kehr, executive director of the Metropolitan Sewer District, said that, if approved by voters in the subdistrict, the proposal would require a tax of about 40 cents for each $100 of assessed property valuation.

As the assessed valuation of the subdistrict increases, the rate would be reduced over the 20-year amortization period, he said. Approval by two-thirds of those voting is needed for passage of the bond issue.

The subdistrict is about three-and-a-half miles wide and seven miles long. Most of it is in unincorporated areas of the county. Communities which lie in it are Crestwood, Oakland, Bella Villa, Lakeshire, St. George, Grantwood Village and parts of Kirkwood, Webster Groves and Sunset Hills.

The proposed trunk sewer would run generally parallel to Gravois creek and would be built in sections from the Mississippi river to its western terminus, at the Leffingwell sewage treatment plant in Kirkwood. A short branch would be constructed near the western terminus so the sewer could also connect with the Oakland treatment plant.

Near the eastern terminus, at a point near Little Broadway and Grand avenue in Lemay, where Gravois creek turns sharply and connects with River Des Peres, the trunk sewer would continue eastward to the Mississippi river.

Construction of the entire trunk sewer is expected to take about two years. However, as sections of it are completed they will be placed in service and the six sewage treatment plants they replace will be abandoned. This includes the Leffingwell and Oakland plants, Kehr said.

The Gravois creek sewer has been under consideration since early in 1956, but the relatively low assessed valuation of the area has prevented the Sewer District from seeking approval of a bond issue large enough to finance the project, the costliest undertaking of the Sewer District since its inception, Kehr said.

proposals have failed in the past, Beckmeyer said.

Leupold indicated that any proposal made by the county board will have to be submitted to the state board by about Oct. 15 in order not to conflict with budgetary planning for the 1959-1960 school year.

Christman said such consolidation would equalize financial resources, improve educational opportunities and "would be preferable to one county-wide district."

Leupold protested that the proposal made no provision for the Kinloch district, which is adjacent to R-2. "Kinloch is one of our biggest problems," he asserted. "If anything is to be done for anyone, Kinloch should be provided for."

J. E. Sigoloff, a member of the board, expressed the view that "the basic reason behind the plan seems to be to obtain more revenue, not to do a better educational job for children in the district."

C. R. Beckmeyer, vice president of the R-6 (Eureka) School board, asked the county board to defer announcement of any consolidation plan affecting that district until after the district holds a bond issue election tentatively set for Sept. 23. The proposed bond issue is to finance construction of a new high school. Similar credit, it was pointed out,

COUNTY NURSING HOME, ONE OF SIX WARNED, CLOSES

Officials Learn of Action When They Go to Inspect Place in Maplewood.

Hanley Nursing Home, one of six in St. Louis county told recently by the Missouri State Division of Health to comply with the new nursing-home law and safety code or cease operations, was closed today.

Mrs. Dorothy Bullock, operator of the home, made the announcement when Prosecuting Attorney Edward W. Garholz and county fire and health department officials went to inspect the establishment at 2000 Bellevue avenue, Maplewood.

The 10-day period given Mrs. Bullock to comply with state regulations to be eligible for a license expired yesterday.

When Garholz and the other officials went to the home today, only two patients were there. Mrs. Bullock said the two would be gone as soon as their relatives could make arrangements for them.

Mrs. Bullock, who has operated the nursing home for the last five years at the Bellevue address, earlier said she did not feel the time allotted was sufficient to get the two-and-one-half story building in condition to comply with the law. She said she already had spent $3000 for improvements of the eight-room structure.

At one time Mrs. Bullock had 16 patients at the nursing home, which was an unlicensed establishment. A registered nurse, she said she would return to nursing.

Fire Marshall John J. Moody of St. Louis county said the other five nursing homes cited are making progress in necessary construction and repair work to be eligible for licenses.

The five are White Oaks Convalescent Home, Pinecrest Home No. 1, Pinecrest Home No. 2, Cedarcroft Home and Green Valley Nursing Home.

WORLD BIBLE QUIZ CONTEST WON BY ISRAELI ENTRANT

JERUSALEM, Israel Sector, Aug. 20 (AP)—A crippled, 30-year-old Jew whose family name means "the wise man," won the first international Bible quiz competition today.

Amos Haham, a synagogue reader in a poor, Orthodox section of Jerusalem, defeated Bible experts from 14 other nations in answering questions about the Old Testament.

The official prize was a glass jar nearly 2000 years old from a tomb at Beth Shearim, in the northern part of the Holy Land. The contest was sponsored by the Israeli Broadcasting Service and the committee for celebrations of the nation's tenth birthday.

The crowd of more than 2000 in the Hebrew University outdoor amphitheater where the finals were held included Israeli President Izhak Ben-Zvi and Premier Ben-Gurion.

The other two finalists were Mrs. Simone Dumont, a Protestant publisher of children's books in Paris, and Miss Irene Santos, a Seventh Day Adventist who teaches in a high school in Rio de Janeiro. Mrs. Myrtle Davis of Buford, Ga., a Baptist who represented the United States, tied for seventh place.

OFFICER SAYS PARENTS FAIL IN TASK OF SAFETY TRAINING

DENVER — (UPI) — A veteran police officer blames parents for not accepting the responsibility of teaching safety to the children.

"They are giving these responsibilities to the schools, churches and police," said Lt. Leonard Johnson, head of the Denver Police Safety Education Division.

"How can citizenship or respect of the laws be imposed without the responsibility starting at home?" he asked, adding:

"It certainly isn't the right of a policeman or teacher to spank a youngster when he disobeys, but that is something lacking in many homes."

ARMY NURSE ACQUITTED IN DEATH OF SOLDIER

FT. SILL, Okla., Aug. 20 (AP)—An Army court-martial board yesterday found an Army nurse not guilty and charges were dropped against a pharmacist in the death of a young soldier May 30.

After deliberating an hour, the court acquitted the nurse, Maj. Thelma B. Goodman of Kremlin, Okla. Shortly afterward the charges against the pharmacist, Pfc. Arthur Blas of Philadelphia, were dropped.

The two had been accused of prescribing an overdose of potassium chloride for Pfc. Ivan W. Wentland of Tacoma, Wash. Col. William Draper, post surgeon, said he had been told by Col. Tom Hembree, Fourth Army staff judge advocate, that a court-martial would be in the best interest of the defendants and the Government. He said he signed the court-martial charges even though a three-member investigating board he appointed recommended that no action be taken.

Racket Inquiry

some money in an envelope. It's possible."

Asked if he went to Pittsburgh to confer about the strike at Esco, he said he had gone to Pittsburgh but could not remember if it had to do with a strike. Asked if he settled the strike, he answered, "Eventually, the men went back to work."

When asked if he got all or any part of the $1000 sent to Des Moines, Baker said, "No."

Hired by Gibbons in 1952. Earlier, Baker told the committee he was hired in 1952 by Harold J. Gibbons, executive vice president of the Teamsters Union and right hand man of Hoffa. At that time Gibbons was secretary-treasurer of local 688 in St. Louis, and Baker was president of a Teamsters local in Washington.

Mrs. Ruth Brougher, described as a former "girl friend" of Baker, testified earlier that Baker left Washington under a cloud after the local's treasury was found to be empty. Mrs. Brougher, 44 years old, was brought here from the Florida Correctional Institution for Women at Lowell. She is serving a 15-year term for manslaughter in the death of Murray DuBois, a Miami union leader.

Baker could not recall how he met Gibbons, but said Gibbons issued the invitation for Baker to come to St. Louis when they were attending a dinner here sponsored by the Americans for Democratic Action.

Concerning Baker's arrest in St. Louis in a violent taxicab drivers' strike in 1953, when he was arrested for carrying a revolver, Kennedy asked Baker where he bought the weapon.

He said he bought it from a cab driver, who said a fare had left it in his cab. Baker said he paid $20 or $25 for it.

Kennedy then read into the record the St. Louis Police Department report on the incident, which said Baker had told police he bought the gun in a swap shop in Indianapolis. Under persistent questioning, Baker admitted he told police a lie. He added:

"I was not under oath then, and little white lies don't mean anything."

The witness was asked by Senator Irving M. Ives (Rep., New York, about having the telephone number of Gov. Averell Harriman in his possession when arrested. Baker answered:

"I had a ham. I had the number of his home because a campaign chairman had once told me if I couldn't get him (the chairman) at headquarters, I could get him at that number."

He belittled at the committee that he was not "close, close, close" to Gov. Harriman and that such testimony was designed to ruin the Governor politically. "He wouldn't know me if he saw me," he said.

Asked by Kennedy whether any other business agents of the Teamsters Union carried pistols during the strike in St. Louis, Baker said they did not. In answer to another question he said he had not discussed with Gibbons whether others should carry weapons.

Kennedy noted that Detective Capt. John A. Doherty, head of the St. Louis police hoodlum squad, had testified yesterday that Baker told Doherty that Gibbons had talked with the then circuit attorney, Edward L. Dowd, and that Baker "had a right" to carry the pistol.

"Saving a Beating." Today, Baker said at first he had not told Capt. Doherty that Several minutes and many questions later, he admitted he had. He said: "Doherty has a rough, tough reputation, and in order to save myself from a beating, I said you'd better check with higher-up people."

Baker insisted he had not mentioned Dowd's name to Doherty, but under further questioning, he said, "I don't deny it. I just don't remember it."

"Why tell the captain all this if it was not true?" Kennedy asked. "Is this just another lie?" "In all probability," Baker answered.

The burly witness was asked whether he knew Louis Shoulters Jr., son of the former police lieutenant, who Doherty said is suspected of being "mixed up" with the disposal of the Greenlease ransom.

"Yes," Baker said, "we were picked up together and put in a police line-up after a taxicab driver had been punched in the nose. I was not palsied with Shoulters."

were't good friends, why was it that they were arrested together."

"Everytime I go to St. Louis I get picked up," Baker said. Says He Knows Costello.

Baker in answer to other questions said he knew Costello and had visited at his home in St. Louis. He said he also knew John Vitale, hoodlum head of the Mafia, terrorist group in St. Louis, and Jack Joseph, who operates a cigarette vending machine business with Vitale.

Asked if he knew Vitale's reputation as a gangster, Baker said, "Sure, he's a nice guy." He said he first met Costello because he was a taxicab company operator, who had no contract with the union. Baker went to see him about the contract, he said, and "we became friendly." He acknowledged he had made many long-distance telephone calls from various sections of the country to Costello in St. Louis.

Mrs. Baker created a sensation yesterday when she said her former husband told her Costello got the missing ransom money.

Capt. Doherty testified that authorities in St. Louis believe that Costello was "mixed up" with former Police Lt. Louis Shoulters, former Patrolman Elmer Dolan, and one of Costello's cab drivers, John O. Hager, in disposing of the money.

Costello, who is at liberty on bond on a conviction for transporting firearms across state lines, refused to answer questions put to him by invoking the Fifth Amendment about 50 times.

Wearing a high-necked slate-gray dress, Mrs. Brougher said she met Baker in 1954 while he was still married to Mrs. Mollie Baker. She said Baker gave her an estimated $25,000 in attorney's fees and living expenses while trying to get her a new trial. She said she had lived with Baker at two estates, complete with swimming pools, and in a penthouse in Florida.

Under oath, she said she knew Baker was "on the lam" from New York City to escape questioning in the waterfront killing of Anthony Hintz, a pier boss. She added:

"I don't think he could go back there until after Gov. Averell Harriman was elected." Baker once told her, she said, that he served time in New York for killing the duck comedian Joe Penner used in his act. He killed it, she said, "I think by throwing a stink bomb on the stage of a theater."

She said she also knew that when he got out of jail in that case, he borrowed some hoodlum's car, "went to the waterfront and whipped the man who had testified against him. Sue said he told her he felt better after that."

Two Who Met Their Maker.

Baker, when he testified about the waterfront apparent-ly tried to keep things on a high plane, but Kennedy was not co-operating.

Asked by Kennedy if he knew Cock-eyed Dunn, a waterfront bum convicted of the murder of Hintz in 1947, Baker said thoughtfully, "Cock-eyed Dunn? I didn't know him as Cock-eyed Dunn. He was John Dunn. He met his Maker—I believe through electrocution in New York."

"What about Squint Sheridan?" Kennedy asked. "You mean Andrew Sheridan?" Baker corrected. "He also met his Maker—through electrocution."

Mrs. Baker said yesterday that Mrs. Brougher gave Baker a ring, "with a stone as big as a quarter," in part payment for the money he spent in her defense.

Mrs. May Traynor, former St. Louis brothel operator, confirmed part of Mrs. Baker's testimony that the ring was given by Baker to Costello for Costello's wife, Barbara, a niece of Mrs. Traynor.

Sold Ring to Costello. Concerning the ring, Baker said he sold it to Costello for $700 to $800. A diamond ring of Mrs. Brougher, he sold to a man, whose name he did not remember, for $400 to $500.

A watch and a lavaliere he got from Mrs. Brougher he gave to the woman's daughter in Waterloo, Ia., he said, "so Ruth would have a little something when she gets out of prison."

Costello, who formerly called Mrs. Traynor, "my aunt," has been accused by her of taking $17,500 from a safe deposit box she held in St. Louis with Mrs. Costello.

The former brothel operator, who told the committee, "I used to operate a rooming house, but I don't any more," said she had seen Baker at Costello's home twice. She described the two men as "close friends." She said agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation has questioned her about the missing ransom, but that she knew nothing about it.

Capt. Doherty described activities of the St. Louis underworld in his testimony. He referred to Costello as "a very close associate" of Gangster Vitale and the top "fence" of stolen goods in the St. Louis area.

Then he added: "He was also mixed up in the Greenlease kidnapping."

Doherty was asked whether Costello had any of the ransom money.

"It is our belief he has," was the reply.

Doherty testified that young Shoulters was "one of the goons" employed by the Teamsters. The elder Shoulters was convicted of perjury in the Greenlease investigation, as was Dolan, the former patrolman.

Doherty told the committee Baker, described as a "head-knocker," was known by police to be a close associate of Anthony Giardano, Anthony Lopiparo and Ralph (Shorty) Callio, members of the Vitale mob, which has been connected by authorities with the murder in 1950 of Charles Binaggio, Kansas City racketeer. Another member of the gang, Doherty said, is Isadore Londe, convicted bomber, who was released from prison about two years ago.

Joseph and Vincent (Piggy Mack) Marchesi, operator of a St. Louis tavern, also were witnesses. Both invoked the Fifth Amendment in refusing to answer questions concerning their connections with the Teamsters and Baker, who sat glumly about 25 feet from his former wife.

Marchesi was asked about the time he was in Chicago with Gus Zapas, alias Gus the Greek, alias Gus Windshields

(because of his thick glasses) a former St. Louisan and now union official in Indiana. When he refused to answer, Senator McClellan said: "Was your mission murder?"

Kennedy said Joseph made at least two trips to Indianapolis, which were paid for by the Teamsters' Union, about the time David Probst, an attorney, who financed a taxicab business there with $8000 borrowed from the Teamsters, mysteriously disappeared.

Antarctic Skywatch May Shed Light on Radio Blackouts

By BILL BECKER
© New York Times News Service

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica—Sky watching has been a major occupation for scientists during the first portion of the International Geophysical Year in the Antarctic.

The results of this study of the southern heavens—when correlated with findings from the Northern Hemisphere—may bring valuable information on the causes of radio blackouts, the electro-magnetic disturbances that wipe out transmission and reception of short-wave signals.

Scientists have been concentrating on the ionosphere and on the aurora australis and other geomagnetic phenomena. The studies of space from 40 to 2500 miles up have led scientists to conclude that ionospheric storms cause a magnetic depression over the polar area that may be a contributing factor to the high incidence of radio blackouts in this part of the world.

Radio Wave Absorption. Ionization in the lower layer of the ionosphere, about 40 miles high, appears to be a prime factor in absorption of radio waves.

The aurora itself may not necessarily contribute to the blackout; radio operators at the United States stations got through the auroral zone to the United States and New Zealand during several major displays.

Except at the pole, the auroral displays were not so spectacular as expected. On several occasions, Arlo U. Landolt of Peconic, Ill., reported that the displays—vast sheets of light over a 100 miles high—encircled the polar plateau for a half-hour or more at a time.

Fluctuations in the ionization of the upper atmosphere are known to be linked to solar activity. The I.G.Y. was set from July 1957, through December 1958, because the period coincides with the maximum of the 11-year cycle of sunspots and flares.

12,000 Feet of Film. At the ionosphere laboratory here at Little America, Hans Bengard of Copenhagen and his assistant, Carl Wyman of Philadelphia, recorded six months' ionospheric activity on 12,000 feet of film, virtually play-by-play.

Since July 1, by means of vertical incidence soundings, a minimum of 98 pictures, actually film graphs, were taken daily.

This was done with an ionosonde, an apparatus that uses the principle of radar and is capable of reaching out 2500 miles. It was used mainly to trace layers below 600 miles. The longest radio blackout of the winter lasted eight days. In this period and most of the winter night the lower or D layer of the ionosphere showed increased electron density, or ionization.

Bengard also reported fluctuations in the higher layers of the ionosphere—the E, F-1 and F-2 regions.

During the winter the E layer becomes sporadic and hard to define. In other seasons it tends to stabilize at a height of about 70 miles.

The F-1 layer is a sort of buffer for the all-important F-2 layer, which reflects radio waves back to earth. The F-2 generally is found from 125 to 200 miles high at night and at 300 miles in the day.

Thus far no clear connection between blackouts and Antarctic night or day has been established.

MINE DETECTOR RUNS DOWN WATCH LOST IN CANDY BAG

Mrs. Kenneth Strough, candy packer, had her wrist watch back today. It had been lost for two days among 1000 one-pound cellophane packages of candy.

A. W. Newby, office manager for the Dye Candy Co., 310 South Twenty-first street, where Mrs. Strough works, said a land mine detector located the $72 watch, which Mrs. Strough lost Monday.

The land-mine detector is owned by Noel Richardson, a railroad worker of 1811 Rutger street, who uses it as a hobby. "Richardson found the watch in the twenty-second case he inspected," said Newby. "It was in a bag in the second row, just as good as new."

GOLDFINE FIRM FILES OVERDUE SEC REPORT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—The Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that Bernard Goldfine's East Boston Co. had filed an overdue financial report. A spokesman indicated SEC would not seek to impose punishment for the delay. The SEC position indicated the agency agreed with a Goldfine claim that he was late in filing because of company records being held by a House subcommittee inquiring into his affairs. Subcommittee Chairman Oren Harris (Dem., Ark.) said he had disputed Goldfine's contention that the subcommittee caused the delay. The financial affairs of East Boston, a holding company, and its real estate subsidiary, the Boston Port Development Co., were a major point in the House inquiry into Goldfine's affairs. The House wound up citing Goldfine, gift-giving friend of presidential aid Sherman Adams, for contempt of Congress for not answering some questions. The inquiry developed that East Boston had not filed financial reports required by the SEC from about 1948 to 1954. Another report due from the Goldfine firm July 29 was not submitted until Aug. 15. The SEC spokesman indicated yesterday the agency would not push for action against the company which is under a 1955 federal court order provided that East Boston had to comply with the SEC rule except where there was "good cause" for delay. And in this case, he indicated, SEC might not be able to show the court there was not a good cause for delay. Some questions asked of Goldfine in the subcommittee hearings took the line that the financial reports not filed in 1948-54 would have disclosed that Goldfine was milking the firm to the detriment of minority stockholders.

New Delhi Drouth Near End. NEW DELHI, Aug. 20 (AP)—The Indian Army brought New Delhi's water supply back to two-thirds of normal today and said it would try to end the capital's drouth tomorrow. An Army spokesman said a channel was dug connecting the new channel of the Jumna river with the city's pumping stations. The river shifted more than 1000 feet at the end of monsoon floods recently.

DEMOCRATS SAY TAX RULES ARE DISCRIMINATORY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—A Democratic-controlled House subcommittee last night reported finding "discriminatory practices and a bedlam of confusion" in tax collectors' offices which it said may typify the whole federal tax system.

Republicans replied that the majority did not uncover any waste or wrongdoing. They added: "This, of course, could not be said of the Internal Revenue Service under the prior Democratic Administration, many of whose high officials were convicted and are serving prison sentences for various types of improper activities."

The charges and countercharges were contained in a report on hearings by a Government Operations subcommittee headed by Representative John A. Blatnik (Dem.), Minnesota.

Two Practices Assailed

The investigators looked into two specific applications of the tax law: Levies on unemployment compensation payments in order to pick up federal taxes due, and the ruling out of travel and away-from-home expenses of construction workers as costs that can be deducted for tax purposes.

The Democratic majority found an "obvious lack of direction and supervision" from the central tax office under Revenue Commissioner Russell C. Harrington.

The Democrats said there is a legal question as to whether taxes due can be collected out of compensation being paid to unemployed persons. They said that in any event the tax return is small and states have objected to this method. A provision barring levies on unemployment compensation to collect federal taxes was passed by the House yesterday and sent to President Eisenhower. 64 Interpretations.

On construction workers' expenses, the Democrats said, the service failed to issue a comprehensive ruling and left each of its 64 district offices to carry out the law under its own interpretation.

The Republican minority under Representative George Meader of Michigan accused the Democrats of irresponsibly distorting the picture to make it look as if the tax collectors "suddenly cracked down in an abusive fashion on workers."

The G.O.P. members said the fault, if any, lies with Congress itself and its tax-writing Ways and Means Committee for leaving the law open to differing interpretation. The Republicans declared themselves personally opposed to attaching unemployment compensation to pick up federal taxes due.

SURVIVES 5-STORY FALL

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (AP)—Gilbert Ruiz, 13 years old, fell five stories from the roof of a tenement yesterday and escaped serious injury because he struck several clothes lines in his plunge.

Police said the boy and his brother, Santo, 14, were playing on the roof when Gilbert tripped and fell.

United Nations

proposal made by the Soviet Union for a Big Four summit meeting. This was the line taken by Premier De Gaulle in direct response to Soviet Premier Khrushchev in the recent exchange of correspondence.

What France Hopes For.

Speaking of the dangers of the cold war in relation to the Middle East, Couve de Murville said it had been in a summit meeting that France had hoped to find "the means for ending acts which might provoke serious crises and which in any event present the stabilization of the situation and normal development of the countries concerned."

In supporting the resolution sponsored by Norway and six other states, Couve de Murville said there was no question of "aggression" in Jordan and Lebanon since Britain and the United States had gone into those countries at the request of their respective governments to try to prevent the use of force and violence.

"Their mission," he said, "is not to impose any solutions but temporarily to safeguard the existence of two states which felt themselves threatened from abroad and thus to permit a restored atmosphere of calm and security to formulate solutions which would answer the aspirations and the desires of their peoples."

Favors Withdrawal Soon.
"This does not mean that these forces should not be withdrawn as soon as possible. The American and the British governments are the first to desire this as we desire it ourselves. They have continued to request from the first day that the U.N. adopt effective measures to supplement those which they had to take urgently at the request of the countries concerned. It is indeed in the framework of the United Nations that lasting solutions of this nature must be sought."

It was on the whole a cautious speech and there was still some mystery as to why Couve de Murville had changed his original intention to stay away from the special emergency Assembly session. He conferred last night with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles a few hours after his arrival here.

West Seeking More Votes.
As the speech-making continued, the American and British delegations were working to try to get a larger majority in favor of the Norwegian resolution. The Norwegian resolution makes no specific demand for the withdrawal but cites declarations from the two chief Western Allies that they will remove their troops when the U.N. decides they are no longer necessary. The British-American idea is that Hammarskjold would arrange for some sort of U.N. force to replace the withdrawing troops.

Ceylon's Stand Presented.
The first speaker today was Ceylon's Sir Claude Corea. He was to be followed by the delegates of Yemen and Ethiopia. "We feel that we cannot agree with the action taken in Lebanon and Jordan," Corea told the delegates. "It is important to remember that at the time of the action the United Nations Security Council had the matter in hand. The reports of the U.N. observer group gave no reason to think that subversive activities were going on against Lebanon."

The real reason for the intervention was the fear of what had happened in Iraq. We are disturbed by the intervention that has taken place. If it is justified in this instance unpopular governments in other countries might appeal for intervention and thereby deny to these people the elementary right of self-determination."

Corea went on to propose that Hammarskjold propose a summit meeting of the big powers and others concerned with the Middle East. Only in this way, he said, could a solution be found for the crisis that will continue to threaten world peace.

Announcing that the Assembly would go into a night meeting, Sir Leslie Munro, Assembly president, was still aiming for adjournment of the special emergency session by tomorrow night.

Hammarskjold's Plans.
As the delegates continued to talk, Hammarskjold went ahead with plans for a quick trip to the Middle East on the assumption that by the end of the week the Assembly would have given him authorization. As he has discussed it with his associates the Secretary General plans only a short stay, acting under the spur of the crisis to make the necessary moves with a staff he would leave behind.

He previously had promised to be present at the opening of the U.N. exhibit and conference on the peaceful uses of atomic energy at Geneva. His schedule called for his appearance at Geneva on Aug. 31 but this seems to be impossible.

Hammarskjold's Deputy Ralph Bunche, will represent the U.N. at the conference. Bunche, who has also had wide experience in the Middle East, said that he hoped that as Hammarskjold returns from Lebanon and Jordan the Secretary General would be able to stop in Geneva for a day or two. The pressure on the top secretariat, as this indicates, is very great in a world in crisis with the U.N. as virtually the only stabilizing influence.

Cairo Press Amalita U.S. for 'War of Nerves' in U.N.
CAIRO, Aug. 20 (AP)—The Cairo press angrily charged the United States today with "extorting extraordinary pressure and waging a war of nerves" in the United Nations Assembly to gain passage of the Norwegian resolution for stabilizing the Middle East.

The Nasserite papers apparently were surprised by the strength mustered for the Western-backed Norwegian peace plan. Two days ago the controlled Cairo press predicted the Norwegian plan was doomed because the African-Asian bloc of 28 nations would prevent it getting the required two-thirds vote.

Today the Cairo papers charged Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd with pressure campaigns on the Latin Americans to win adoption of what the editorialists termed "a distorted copy of the Eisenhower plan."

The Cairo newspapers also attacked Lebanese Foreign Minister Charles Malik, who was accused of "repeating in the United Nations the big lie about fictitious U.A.R. intervention in Lebanon and deliberately forgetting the act was actual and flagrant aggression perpetrated by United States troop landings."

PETITIONS SEEK HOWARD COUNTY HOSPITAL VOTE

FAYETTE, Mo., Aug. 20—Petitions are being circulated here asking the Howard County Court to call an election for a bond issue to establish a county hospital.

Proponents hope to submit the plan to Howard county voters at the general election in November.

The proposal calls for the county to authorize a bond issue of $375,000 with a matching amount to come from the Federal Government under the Hill-Barton law.

It is believed $750,000 would erect and fully equip a 50-bed hospital.

Privately-owned Lee Hospital, which is equipped with 43 beds, has been placed on a probationary status, ending May 31, 1961, under the state's new licensing law. Thousands of dollars of fire-safety equipment must be installed in the Fayette hospital for temporary approval by the state.

Seven Killed in Collision. PREWITT, N. M., Aug. 20 (AP)—A head-on collision on U.S. Highway 66 killed seven and critically injured several other persons early today. Two cars, reported bearing Colorado and California license plates, collided one-half mile west of Prewitt.

RED CHINA SAYS YUGOSLAVIA HELPED U.S. SPY AGENCIES

TOKYO, Aug. 20 (UPI)—Communist China accused Yugoslavia today of carrying out "criminal work" for United States espionage agencies in east Europe. The charge was made by the official newspaper, Peiping People's Daily. It was reported by the New China News Agency.

It coincided with a charge that Yugoslavs had murdered Albanian citizen Hasan Spata. The Communist newspaper said Spata had been a United States agent in refugee camps in western Europe for years and when Spata decided to return home "United States agencies tried all means to prevent him from doing so, but failed."

"Now," said the paper, "the Yugoslav authorities have successfully accomplished the criminal work of United States espionage agencies."

STRATTON INDORSES PLAN FOR HORSESHOE LAKE PARK

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 20—A proposal to convert Horseshoe Lake in Madison county into an Illinois state park has been endorsed by Gov. William G. Stratton. It was announced today.

Henry D. Karandjeff, Granite City, chairman of the Horseshoe Lake Area Study Commission created by the Illinois Legislature in 1955, said Gov. Stratton predicted approval by the Legislature and indicated he would approve $750,000 as a starting appropriation to purchase and improve part of the 7700-acre area. The commission proposed long-range improvements costing $3,500,000.

State Senator James O. Monroe of Collinsville, a member of the commission, said he favors establishing a committee to determine the nature of the improvements. They would include beach areas, fishing facilities, picnic grounds and sanitation facilities.

Chokes on Steak. AKRON, O., Aug. 20 (UPI)—Frank McGarvey, 64 years old, choked to death on a piece of steak at a wedding breakfast in a restaurant here following his marriage to Helen Carleton, 54, of Lorain, O., yesterday.

YOUTH TRAPPED ON LEDGE 600 FEET UP MOUNTAIN SIDE

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif., Aug. 20 (AP)—A 17-year-old youth was trapped today on a one-foot ledge 600 feet up on Glacier Point.

Rangers of Yosemite National Park said Bill Beeghley of Long Beach, Calif., became trapped late Tuesday. Two friends who were accompanying him turned back but Beeghley continued along a dangerous path alone.

He was spotted from the valley when he waved his white shirt.

Rangers said the boy was about 600 feet from the nearest safe spot and the area between him and sure footing is covered with rocky crags.

Rangers maintained an all-night vigil, calling to Beeghley by bullhorn every 10 minutes to keep him awake. Had the boy fallen asleep, the rangers said, he would have tumbled at least 600 feet down the granite wall.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH Wed., Aug. 20, 1958 11A

Nominated by Eisenhower. WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—President Eisenhower nominated Harry A. Bullis of Minneapolis, board chairman of General Mills, to be head of

COURT QUASHES CASE OF 3 WHO HID RED LEADER

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20 (AP) — Indictments against three persons convicted in 1954 of hiding a fugitive Communist leader were dismissed in United States district court yesterday.

Assistant United States Attorney Richard Foster moved for dismissal. The United States Supreme Court had reversed their convictions in 1957 on the ground that the Federal Bureau of Investigation had illegally seized documents at the hideout.

The three are Sidney Steinberg and Samuel L. Coleman, both of New York, and Mrs. Shirley Kremen, Los Angeles. They, along with Carl E. Ross, a Minnesota Red leader, were convicted of harboring Robert G. Thompson, Thompson had been a fugitive for two years after he was convicted of violating the Smith act along with 10 other Communist leaders in a lengthy New York trial.

All four were sentenced to prison terms varying from two to three years. Ross, the only one who did not appeal, has served his two-year term. The other three remained free on bail.

BRITAIN IS SAID TO PLAN LARGE LOAN TO INDIA

LONDON, Aug. 20 (AP) — Britain is planning a big loan to India to help Prime Minister Nehru's government over a foreign exchange crisis, sources close to the treasury said today.

If Britain comes forward, additional aid is expected to be provided by the United States, Japan and West Germany. A British loan ranging from $210,000,000 to $280,000,000 has been mentioned unofficially.

Some financial quarters said Britain—in advance of a meeting called by the World Bank in Washington next week—has already given India word that the loan will be forthcoming.

The contracts were awarded in connection with the Terrier, the Marine Corps' land guided missile.

Foreign Aid
$2,670,000,000, is for the operating expenses and construction program of the Atomic Energy Commission.
Another conference committee last night reinstated Indiana in the federal aid to education bill, informed sources said.
The committee eliminated from the education measure an amendment added by the Senate that would have excluded Indiana from all benefits in the bill. The amendment was offered by Senator William E. Jenner (Rep., Ind.), last week. It had come under fire from Indiana House members of both parties on the grounds that Indiana residents would pay taxes to support the education program but get no benefits.
Passport Bill.
A bill to arm the State Department with power to deny passports to persons who knowingly have tried to promote Communism won unanimous approval from the House Foreign Affairs Committee.
The measure is aimed at getting around a June 16 Supreme Court ruling that the department had no authority to bar travel abroad by American citizens because of their beliefs or associations. The bill is more narrowly worded than an Administration measure which the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has pigeonholed. Critics called the Senate bill "blunderbuss infringement of constitutional rights."

PLANE SHOT DOWN AS 3 MISSILES ARE FIRED BY ACCIDENT

CLINTON, Mo., Aug. 20 (AP)—A training plane was shot down today when another plane's Falcon missiles fired accidentally, the Air Force reported.

A spokesman at Richards-Gebaur Air Force Base near Grandview, Mo., said the plane which crashed, a T-33 jet trainer, was a target plane in a mock interception. Both men in the T-33 parachuted and suffered only minor injuries. The spokesman said the T-33 was supposed to be intercepted by an F-102 jet fighter. Three of the interceptor's missiles fired accidentally and all three struck the trainer.

The Falcon, an air-to-air weapon, is not aimed like a gun but automatically seeks its target.

U.S. CITIZENSHIP OF MAN JAILED IN IRAQ QUESTIONED

BAGHDAD, Aug. 20 (AP)—The United States embassy established today that a naturalized American arrested Sunday as a material witness in the Baghdad treason trial had applied for Iraqi citizenship earlier this year.

This invalidates the United States citizenship of Greek-born Constantine John Halkias, unless it can be shown he applied for Iraqi citizenship under duress.

Halkias, who has a wife from Tennessee and two small children, was arrested after a witness at the trial of Maj. Gen. Chaudhry Daghastani named Halkias's store as a place where payment was made for financing an anti-Communist underground organization in 1952. Halkias is in jail.

BEAR SHOT FROM PORCH IN SUBURB OF DULUTH

DULUTH, Minn., Aug. 20 (AP)—James Bingham, a veteran hunter, bagged his first bear last night with one shot as he stood on his back porch in the well-populated suburb of Piedmont Heights.

Bingham looked up when his grandson, Stevie Remos, 7 years old, of Superior, Wis., banged on the back door as a 300-pound animal rummaged in a garbage can.

With good sighting supplied by street lights, Bingham killed the bear with a shot from 50 feet. Piedmont Heights is three miles from downtown Duluth. The bears have been moving into small communities and Duluth suburbs searching for food because of the scarcity of blueberries in the woods.

PACIFIST AT MISSILE SITE INJURED; ARREST ORDERED

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Aug. 20 (UPI)—The project manager for an Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile site has sworn out a warrant for the arrest of a pacifist struck yesterday by a construction truck.

The pacifist, Kenneth Calkins, 23 years old, suffered a fractured pelvis when the truck crushed him against a steel gate in front of the I.C.B.M. construction area.

Sheriff Norbert E. Tuck said he would arrest Calkins and Calkins' wife, Allanor, as soon as Calkins is released from the hospital.

Calkins was hurt while sitting in the middle of a gate entrance to the site 20 miles northwest of here. The driver said he was braking the truck when it struck Calkins.

Calkins and his wife have been engaging in a "non-violent" protest against the production of armaments.

RAT POISON USED TO KILL PACK OF LIONS IN INDIA

U.S. Defenses

Some Democratic Senators, led by Senator Stuart Symington of Missouri and John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, have been critical of Administration defense policies. Kennedy has predicted a "missile gap" in 1960-64, when the United States will fall dangerously behind the Soviets in nuclear capability.

Other Comments. In response to other questions on the international outlook, the President declared: The United States has no specific agreement with Britain to keep American troops in Lebanon as long as British forces are in Jordan. Asked about reports that American troops may be withdrawn on Sept. 30, Mr. Eisenhower replied that he did not want to speculate on any specific date.

He said, as he has before, that the United States wants to get out of Lebanon just as quickly as the local government wants us to, and secondly, when the United Nations can assume responsibility for keeping peace in the area. Discussing the possibility of a permanent U.N. police force, the President agreed with a reporter that it did not seem likely there would be action on this proposal at the current meeting of the U.N. General Assembly.

Creation of a "standby United Nations peace force" ready to go to the aid of any nation threatened by subversion or attack was one of the six points proposed by Mr. Eisenhower in his address to the General Assembly a week ago.

Asked if he intended to press for this part of his plan, the Chief Executive pointed out that he had worked on details of a United States contingent in a U.N. force while he was still in the Army.

Idea Needs to Grow.

Many people believe that if we are going to have peace, we need such a U.N. force, Mr. Eisenhower went on. He said this was one of those plans that needs to grow and come about with the growth of tolerance and understanding among nations, not one of those things that come about at this moment.

Another reporter wanted to know what the prospects were for establishment of a regional economic development program to improve the living standards of the Arab nations, another of the six points proposed by the President.

Mr. Eisenhower replied that the Asian and African nations had commented favorably on the idea but had attached certain conditions. He added that it was sometimes necessary to transcend national boundaries in these matters.

Amplifying on this, he explained that in the past the United States had dealt with the countries of the Middle East on a nationalistic basis. We might be better advised now to go beyond that, he added.

In response to another question, the President said the United States had no plans to station marines in British-ruled Singapore.

Need for Firmness.

A reporter asked Mr. Eisenhower whether indirect aggression could ever really be stopped. When the United States checks an opponent by force of arms, the reporter said, the opponent inevitably resorts to indirect tactics. He inquired whether indirect aggression thus was heading us for a big war.

The President replied that he had never said such aggression would lead to a big war but it would lead to "much more trouble" unless stopped.

He then added that he believed developing circumstances eventually will show all countries where their best interests lie.

If we are firm in what we believe to be right, even the Russians eventually will see that subversion is not advisable or feasible, Mr. Eisenhower declared.

Tax Indictment

of selling more than six ounces of heroin on three occasions in 1957 to David W. McNeely, former undercover agent for the federal narcotics bureau.

In a fourth indictment, two employees of Campbell 66 Express Inc. were charged with conspiracy to steal five automobile tires from an interstate shipment being made by the B. F. Goodrich Co. at Tuscaloosa, Ala. to the General Motors Chevrolet Division here.

ROOFER IS KILLED IN FALL

Wilbert P. Miller, a roofer, was killed yesterday when he fell from the roof of a building at the Army Engineers depot at 600 Niedringhaus avenue, Granite City. He was 39 years old and lived at 5225 Hodi-mont avenue, Jennings. Miller was a member of a crew of men removing the old roof at the time of the accident. He fell about 45 feet, suffering head and internal injuries.

2 OFFICERS OF UAW LOCAL CHARGED WITH EXTORTION

DETROIT, Aug. 20 (AP)—Two officers of a United Auto Workers Union local were charged yesterday with extortion, larceny and obtaining money under false pretenses from a vending machine firm owner.

Wayne County Prosecutor Samuel Olsen recommended the three-count warrants against Edward Drzewiecki and Stanley F. Baker. Drzewiecki is president of UAW Local 380 at Gear Grinding & Machine Co. in suburban Hamtramck.

and Baker is the local's business agent. Olsen said the two were trapped by police Friday after receiving $100 in marked bills from Harry Burquette, owner of Oasis Vending Machine Co. Burquette said the two had demanded the money as the union's share of profits from coffee vending machines at the Hamtramck plant.

Carpenters Union Head Likely To Lose AFL-CIO Council Seat

FOREST PARK, Pa., Aug. 20 (AP)—Carpenters union president Maurice A. Hutcheson, under fire on corruption charges and cited for contempt of Congress, is reported due for ouster from the AFL-CIO hierarchy.

AFL-CIO sources predicted today Hutcheson would be asked to supply an explanation of his refusal to answer Senate racketeering committee questions about expenditures of union funds.

Fellow labor chiefs said privately they expect Hutcheson to refuse the demand and probably resign as a member of the AFL-CIO Executive Council, the federation's top policy-making group.

The AFL-CIO council members already have figured on Hutcheson's resignation in electing painters Union president Lawrence M. Raftery, La-succeding James Petrillo, resigned Musicians Union president.

There is an informal understanding that when and if Hutcheson, a Building Trades leader, leaves the council his successor will be from outside the building trades union group, as was Petrillo. The Carpenters are the largest and most powerful of the 18 AFL-CIO unions involved in construction.

It was learned, moreover, that the AFL-CIO plans to launch its own investigation of Hutcheson's Carpenters Union to determine whether the union should be ousted for corruption.

Hutcheson has been charged in Senate hearings with mishandling union funds in paying for a book praising him and his father, the late William (Big Bill) Hutcheson, and with profiting in Indiana's road right-of-way deals.

The Senate cited Hutcheson Monday for contempt of Congress. This grew out of Hutcheson's refusal to answer questions by the Rackets committee. Hutcheson did not invoke the Fifth Amendment, but challenged the committee's authority to ask questions about his financial dealings.

Meanwhile, another slap against the expelled Teamsters Union was expected. The AFL-CIO chiefs, meeting at a union-operated summer camp in the Pocono mountains, were reported ready to recommend that the Canadian Council of Labor and the International Transport Federation oust the Teamsters.

This would be aimed at isolating the Teamsters further from the rest of organized labor, both nationally and on a world-wide basis, because of corruption charges against the truck union.

United Press International said the executive council ordered the Operating Engineers union to take specific clean-up measures within 60 days. At the same time, it praised the union for progress in rooting out corruption and postponed a full-scale investigation to see what the union will do.

Meany said the action was neither a vote of confidence or a vote of no confidence in the leadership of Engineers' president Joseph Delaney, a good friend of Meany. Delaney came into office when ailing William E. Maloney, accused of milking the union for decades, resigned under doctor's orders.

(The council said a full-scale investigation of the 270,000-member union would be started if there was no compliance.)

The Jewelry Workers union is under investigation for alleged "sweetheart" deals exploiting Puerto Rican workers. The council may demand ouster of union president Hyman Powell.

On another matter, the federation's chiefs yesterday issued a statement blaming Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell in part for the death of a general labor bill in Congress.

Mitchell fired back a statement calling the AFL-CIO remarks about him unwarranted. He said in Washington that "nothing could be further from the truth" than the statement that he was opposed to constructive labor legislation.

Mitchell is due to meet face to face with the AFL-CIO chiefs in Forest Park tomorrow.

Demonstration of Loyalty. TEHRAN, Aug. 20 (AP)—About 100,000 civilians and army men turned out yesterday in a demonstration of loyalty to the Shah and his regime. It was the anniversary of the 1953 uprising that overthrew Premier Mohammed Mossadegh, who tried to restrict the Shah's powers.

Committee Votes Big Increase In AEC Funds for Research

By WILLIAM K. WYANT JR.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Chronic misgivings within the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy over the adequacy of federal support for "atom-smashing" and other basic scientific research were apparent this week in the turmoil of Congressional adjournment.

Following extensive hearings, the testimony of which has just been published, the committee authorized construction of $40,000,000 in new research tools for fiscal 1959. The Atomic Energy Commission had sought a total of only $10,000,000, and the Budget Bureau scaled the request down to $2,500,000.

The committee not only gave the AEC 16 times as much as was requested for physical research tools but recommended a sizable increase in operating funds. This item, which has been held at about $71,500,000 annually for two years, promises to be $90,000,000 in fiscal 1959.

Warnings From Scientists. Action to increase facilities for physical research, despite the Administration's failure to press for them, came after testimony by leading American scientists, who warned that this nation might fall behind Russia unless the program got more emphasis.

The subcommittee on research and development is headed by Representative Marvin Price (Dem.), East St. Louis. It was told last February by Glenn T. Seaborg, Nobel Prize-winning chemist, that support for basic research should be increased 50 to 100 per cent. Seaborg is associate director of the University of California Radiation Laboratory.

"We do not want," Seaborg said, "to be suddenly astonished that other nations have found some discovery of great practical significance in a basic research effort where such a discovery was unexpected."

"It is important to encourage the development of new ideas even when their usefulness seems very remote. One can never predict what important new principle may be made by a carefully conceived experiment carried out to test ideas on the fundamental nature of matter, but one can predict that major advances are not very likely to come from an effort devoted entirely to improvements of today's technology."

Accurate Evaluation Needed. "We hope that the intensive work of our scientists will be so unhindered that many of the major new advances of the future will come from our own laboratories. At the very least we hope that the experience of our scientists will be fundamental and deep enough to permit them to make an accurate evaluation of any scientific advances wherever they may be made in the world."

After this chilling introduction, the Price subcommittee listened for nine days as a succession of distinguished chemists and physicists explained what they are trying to do, and why they need the elaborate and expensive tools on which the United States is spending many millions.

It was not difficult to understand the possible future usefulness of efforts to solve the problem of controlled thermonuclear power—harnessing the energy of the hydrogen bomb—or of the exciting work that is going on in discovery of new elements that are heavier than uranium.

Growing List of Accelerators. Somewhat harder to relate to the everyday world was the discussion of high energy physics with its "bubble chambers," the so-called "strange" particles, and the burgeoning list of machines for accelerating particles in such a way that scientists may learn more about the structure of the universe.

In using the accelerators, a target material, which may be a metal foil, for example, is exposed to a stream of high energy particles. From such experiments, much is being learned about the nature of nuclear reactions.

The first laboratory-controlled disintegration of an atomic nucleus was achieved in a 400,000-volt particle accelerator built at Cambridge University, England, in 1931. Now the nation's two most powerful accelerators are the cosmotron (3 billion electron volts) at Brookhaven National Laboratory, Long Island, and the bevatron (6 billion volts) at Berkeley, Calif.

Big Soviet Machine.

Russia now has a 10-billion volt machine in operation; but the AEC's 30-billion volt Alternating Gradient Synchrotron at Brookhaven National Laboratory is expected to get into action in 1960. Russia is already talking about bringing in a 50-to-60 bev machine in 1963, but American scientists are skeptical.

Such tools for science are incredibly delicate and complicated. The new American A.G.S. will cost about $29,000,000 and has a vacuum chamber a half mile in circumference. Protons will be injected at velocities of 50,000 electron volts and, in the course of 300,000 revolutions, will be kicked up to a maximum energy of 25 to 30 billion electron volts.

When Robert K. Adair of Brookhaven, a physicist, was telling about his work, a committee member asked him what practical application it might have to American technology.

Adair said frankly: "When you are really in the forefront of research, and I think we people who are working in fundamental particles are perhaps really the first wave, it is then more difficult to relate anything. You do not really know what you are doing, and you do not really know what is going to happen."

New Construction Voted.

Nevertheless, the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy authorized $15,000,000 in new construction in connection with accelerators that the Government had not sought but which scientists believed essential.

The committee said budget requests for physical research had been inadequate. Not only that, the committee pointed out that the Government had withheld funds for "five important projects" totaling $11,170,000 which Congress authorized in the fiscal year 1957.

Price charged that the funds the Administration sought for fiscal 1959 were "shockingly low" and added up to neglect of the nation's needs in this field.

Price released a letter written early this year to Lewis M. Strauss, then AEC chairman, by Warren C. Johnson, chairman of the AEC general advisory committee and dean of physical sciences at the University of Chicago. The nine-member committee advises the AEC on scientific and technical matters.

In his letter, Johnson said funds for the AEC's division of research were "greatly inadequate." He said the $16,000,000 spent annually to support high-energy physics was not enough to permit the cosmotron and bevatron to operate on a full schedule.

"In addition," Johnson said, "these laboratories have been in a position to accept only about 40 per cent of the requests that come to them for the use of the accelerators for worthwhile experiments, and many other physicists and teams in universities throughout the country do not even apply for machine time, since it is apparent that none is available."

Johnson said that the operating budget of the AEC division of research ought to be at least $100,000,000 now and that within four years it should be increased to at least $150,000,000. The reaction of the Administration became apparent when President Eisenhower issued a statement from the White House Aug. 4 approving the atomic authorization bill but stipulating certain of its provisions as "undesirable."

Among other things, he said the bill authorized construction of research facilities totaling $39,000,000 in addition to those he requested, and the design of four power reactors.

President's Criticism. "These are not undesirable projects," Mr. Eisenhower conceded, "but they have been included without adequate consideration of other pressing governmental needs requiring funding in fiscal year 1959."

"I feel obliged to urge the Congress to guard more vigilantly against the ever-present tendency to burden the Government with programs, such as those I have here described, the relative urgency and essentiality of which have not been solidly determined."

Price's reaction was equally emphatic. He said basic research, on which the AEC spends about 3 per cent of its budget, was the most important single phase of the AEC's activity because future progress depended on it.

"The President said the items were 'not undesirable' but can wait. The scientists can't do anything without tools, and we can't delay too long in getting these tools. Ten years from now we may suffer because of what we don't do today."

$10,682,152 NAVY ORDER FOR THIS INSPECTION AREA

Contracts or orders totaling $10,682,152 were awarded to companies in the St. Louis inspection area last month for procurement of materials for the Navy. Comdr. L. C. Knowles, Inspector of naval material, St. Louis, announced today.

The St. Louis inspection area covers Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming and parts of Illinois and Iowa. Comdr. Knowles said the companies in St. Louis which received larger awards were Universal Match Corp., Vickers Inc., Lambert Engineering and Lambert Tool Specialties Co.

Congress

ing arranged. The Court called this unnecessary delay.

The House passed a bill providing that confessions should not be barred from criminal trials solely because of delay in arraignment. The Senate Judiciary Committee amended the bill to specify "reasonable" delay. A fight to knock out the word failed 41 to 39 yesterday. The bill now goes back to the House.

Attorney General William F. Rogers is supporting the arraignment bill, but the Eisenhower Administration had opposed the Jenner-Butler bill as had the American Bar Association.

The most controversial aspect of the Jenner-Butler bill is a section that would strip the court of its power to review cases involving state rules for the admission of lawyers to practice. The court reversed two state actions barring from law practice men with past Communist connections.

Another part of the bill would make congressional committees the judge of the competency of questions to witnesses. The court last year freed John T. Watkins, a union officer, who had been convicted of contempt of Congress for refusing to answer a question put to him by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Watkins contended the question was not pertinent to its investigation.

Still another section would undo the effects of a court decision by restoring to the states the right to enforce their own anti-subversive laws. The final part is designed to undo the effect of a Supreme Court decision overturning the conviction of some California Communist leaders under the Smith anti-subversion law. The court's majority opinion held that the Smith Act covered only advocating action to overthrow the Government, not just talking about it. The Jenner-Butler bill would eliminate this distinction.

Mineral Subsidies Bill. A final vote was expected in the House today on the mineral subsidies bill.

Afterward, the House was expected to turn to measures designed to permit the United States to help European countries develop peaceful uses of atomic energy. The Senate has approved the legislation. Opponents of the mineral subsidies bill failed in efforts to kill it yesterday. They contended it would set a precedent for giving subsidy help to other industries.

The legislation is an expanded version of a bill which passed the Senate. It has the endorsement of the Eisenhower Administration. The measure would permit the Government to lend a financial helping hand to the depressed mining business in the western states.

It would authorize a purchase-stockpile program for domestic copper; price supports for lead, zinc, tungsten and acid-grade fluorspar, and production incentive payments for columbium-tantalum, beryl and chrome.

Amendments Sought. Amendments, including one to bring stores of additional minerals under the subsidy plan, are to be taken up. Representative John P. Saylor (Rep.), Pennsylvania, said he would offer such an amendment because the minerals named in the bill should not be singled out for preferential treatment.

Representative Michael J. Kirwan (Dem.), Ohio, led the attack on the bill. He said domestic supplies of lead, zinc, copper and other minerals far exceed defense requirements. The Government has spent more than two billion dollars stockpiling minerals, he added.

Industry spokesmen "cry the foreigners are shipping metals into this country," Kirwan said.

The "foreigners," he said are the big United States mining companies which are "loading up this country" with metals produced with American money and cheap foreign labor. The big firms last year imported more than 500,000 tons of copper, about the same amount of lead and 700,000 tons of zinc, Kirwan said.

The congressional stalemate on new housing legislation appears likely to remain unbroken.

Representative Albert Rains (Dem.), Alabama, sponsor of the bill, told reporters today that "the likelihood is that there won't be any bill" despite talk of attempts to revive one.

His cut-down housing bill, reduced from nearly $2,500,000,000 in new Housing Authority spending to $975,000,000, was defeated in the House Monday by a six-vote margin under procedure requiring a two-thirds vote for passage.

The House passed a compromise bill appropriating $1,118,000,000 for water projects and other public works in the year which started July 1. The voice vote sent the bill to the Senate.

The House approved a $45,000,000 cut from requested

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH Wed., Aug. 20, 1958 17A

funds for the new National Aeronautics and Space Agency despite assertions that the cut would slow United States efforts to beat Russia in space.

NOISE IS SAID TO REPLACE GERMS AS HEALTH MENACE

PARIS — (UPI)—A leading French physician maintains that man-made noises have replaced germs as the main threat to human health.

"Noise has become a real social danger" to the present and future generations, said Prof. Fernand Tremolieres, a member of the French Academy of Medicine.

He said that noise cannot only cause psychic troubles but also inflicts organic damage leading to such chronic ailments as hardening of the arteries, ulcers and even goiter.

The patent was granted to Hirotada Mural of Tokyo.

WASHINGTON — For use in theaters, buses, coal mines, oil fields, chemical factories and other places where smoking is prohibited, a Japanese patentee has invented an inhaling and sniffing pipe. It has a mouthpiece for inhaling and a nosepiece for sniffing an atomized solution conveying tobacco fragrance. The solution, carried in a small bottle under the user's lip, is a mixture of a liquid gas such as freon and an extract made from the tobacco plant or smoke.

Science Now Removes Warts Without Cutting or Burning!

Doctors Develop New Compound to Make Warts Vanish!

New York, N. Y. (Special)—Now, science has found a new compound that removes common warts quickly, safely, without painful surgery or electrolysis.

Developed by a famous medical laboratory, this remarkable compound penetrates warts... destroys their cells... actually dissolves warts away. There is, for instance, the thrill of commanding its fine performance... the joy of being surrounded by its Fleetwood luxury... the pleasure of riding with its marvelous comfort.

And yet, outshining all of these wonderful Cadillac pleasures—and adding an extra lustre and meaning to each—is the fact that they all derive from motordom's soundest investment.

For a Cadillac—from any consideration—is among the most practical of motor cars to own, to drive and to enjoy.

In original cost, a Cadillac car represents a truly remarkable value—surprisingly modest in price for so prized a possession.

Its extraordinary dependability and its remarkable endurance are world-famed.

And in resale value, it is in a class all its own.

In fact, it has been wisely remarked that a new Cadillac's only rival—from a standpoint of investment—is a used Cadillac!

Surely, this happy circumstance merits your own personal investigation.

Your Cadillac dealer is long practiced in the art of satisfying fine car owners—and he will be most accommodating in helping you to take the step up to a 1958 Cadillac.

Why not pay him a visit soon—and make motordom's wisest investment yours!

responsibility of each state. Each state owes to its inhabitants, to its sister states and to the Union the obligation to suppress unlawful forces. It cannot be action or deliberate failure to act permit violence to frustrate the preservation of individual rights as determined by a court decree. It is my hope that each state will fulfill its obligation with a full realization of the gravity of any other course.

"Defiance of this duty would present the most serious problem, but there can be no equivocation as to the responsibility of the Federal Government in such an event. My feelings are exactly as they were a year ago. As I said then:

"The very basis of our individual rights and freedoms rests upon the certainty that the President and the executive branch of government will support and insure the carrying out of the decisions of the federal courts."

"Every American must understand that if an individual, community or state is going successfully and continuously to defy the courts, then there is anarchy."

"I continue to insist that the common sense of the individual and his feeling of civic responsibility must eventually come into play if we are to solve this problem."

Criticism of President.
In the background of the statement was criticism of the Administration by persons concerned with civil rights that the President had failed since the Supreme Court decision of 1954 to prepare the South for admitting Negroes to the public schools.

Mr. Eisenhower and Attorney General William P. Rogers have been urged by minority groups to put their weight behind a campaign to gain popular support for the law interpreted by the Supreme Court.

The problem of enforcing federal law against local resistance was again put up to the Administration by the action Monday of the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis. In a six-to-one decision the court reinstated the school integration program in Little Rock, reversing a ruling by a United States district judge in Arkansas that a delay for a "cooling-off period" should be effected.

Yesterday Gov. Orval E. Faubus of Arkansas, who tried last fall to prevent integration at Little Rock's Central High School, told the city's Board of Education to find a way of suspending integration when school opens in two weeks or quit.

On Use of Troops.
Although the President was not specific, the import of his statement today was that he would use federal troops again if need be.

In reply to Mr. Eisenhower's statement, Gov. Faubus said the President was trying to enforce a court decision that is unconstitutional.

("What Mr. Eisenhower and many others who express similar viewpoints fail to realize is that they are supporting a court decision which is not constitutional and there are millions of people in every section of the country who know it," he said.

"Because of that, they cannot obtain peaceable compliance with illegal court orders which go against the overwhelming sentiments of the people, simply by invoking the sacred name of the Constitution and the once-magic name of Eisenhower. The latter lost its luster and appeal months and months ago."

Personal Views Not Given.
Asked later in the conference whether he would state his personal feelings about the integration problem, the President said he would not. He said he had taken an oath to uphold the law and he expected to carry it out. It might make the execution more difficult, he said, if he should offer his personal views.

The President was asked whether he had met with Gov. J. Lindsay Almond of Virginia to discuss that state's integration problems. He said he had not but that he had talked to one or two Virginia political figures.

Mr. Eisenhower was wearing a light brown summer suit and a dark brown tie. He appeared relaxed and in excellent health, and showed a trace of impatience only once, when asked if he thought United States defenses were adequate.

In the course of commenting on a variety of subjects, he said he had no plans at the moment to undertake campaign trips this fall, but indicated he would have something to say about congressional races.

Replying to a question, Mr. Eisenhower said he had never stated specifically he would not support a candidate because of a single vote or expression, but he added that if he was at loggerheads with a Congressman on foreign aid, reciprocal trade and national defense legislation, he could not consider himself in the same political camp with that Congressman.

Asked to evaluate passage of a farm bill carrying the general approval of Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, the President said he thinks members of Congress are learning Benson's ideas are sound and are good for the country.

The President was asked also whether he would ever consider calling on former President Truman for some service in the Administration. The President has never invited Truman to the White House. Mr. Eisenhower said of course he would consider it because Truman had had a great and tough experience of his own. But he said he would not discuss personalities.

The question was prompted by a suggestion by Bernard M. Baruch, financier and former White House adviser, that former Presidents be included as members of the National Security Council. Mr. Eisenhower said he does not think it necessary to expand the council. He explained he can call in advisers to sit with the council when he needs them.

On Wilkins Resignation.
The President was asked also whether he was seeking the resignation of J. Ernest Wilkins, assistant Secretary of Labor, who is a Negro. Mr. Eisenhower said he was not, but he said Wilkins had spoken to him about the possibility of resigning. He added that if Wilkins did resign, the President hoped he would retain his membership on the Civil Rights Commission.

A reporter told the President that many people were "fed up with rising prices and disappointed you have not exercised more vigorous leadership." The President commented he had appealed to business and labor leaders to hold down the price-wage spiral and had tried to keep federal costs down despite what he termed an obvious congressional intent to spend more money. He was not ready to suggest definite controls, the President added.

The reporter suggested the President might have taken a "tough" position on the recent rise in steel prices. He replied that when the reporter spoke that way he was really asking for specific Government controls. A slight rise in steel prices, the President said, is not a very great factor in household living costs.

Would Like a Vacation.
Mr. Eisenhower said he would like to take a vacation later this month or early in September but he was not sure whether he could get away. Asked if he might make another visit to Newport, R.I., the Chief Executive suggested he might talk this over with an "advisory committee" of reporters who regularly accompany him on his out-of-town trips.

A moment later, another newspaper man said he would like "to return to the matter of a vacation." The President grinned and shot back, "So would I." He added that his plans were quite indefinite right now.

His farm at Gettysburg, Pa., Mr. Eisenhower said in answer to another vacation-minded reporter, is always a possibility but he keeps hoping to go to some more "salubrious" climate. There have been reports that the President will spend most of his vacation at Gettysburg but will go to Newport for a week or so.

CYRUS EATON JR. DISCUSSING ORE PORT WITH GREENLAND

© New York Times News Service COPENHAGEN, Aug. 20—

Talks opened here yesterday between Cyrus S. Eaton Jr., son of the United States financier Cyrus S. Eaton of Cleveland, and Eske Brun, head of the Danish government's Greenland department, to get approval for the construction of port facilities in West Greenland.

The Eatons plan the transshipment of iron ore from the Ungava bay deposits in northern Quebec. The port planned in Greenland is at Rype island, slightly more than 500 miles from Ungava bay.

The plan has been in being since 1954. In August 1956, Young Eaton led an expedition to Rype island accompanied, among others, by Trevor Lloyd, professor of geography at Dartmouth and former Canadian consul in Greenland, who is also here with Eaton as an advisor.

GAMING INQUIRY MAY CONTINUE INTO NEXT WEEK

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 20 — A federal grand jury investigation of nation-wide gambling, in which witnesses have been called here from far and wide, including St. Louis, may extend into next week.

United States Attorney Don A. Tabbert said the inquiry might take longer than Friday, when it had been expected to end.

The grand jury has run into a road block of witnesses who are taking the protection of the Fifth Amendment on grounds of possible self-incrimination.

Sam Einstoss of San Francisco yesterday became the fourteenth witness to invoke the constitutional grounds.

Some witnesses, on the other hand, were co-operative yesterday. They included Benjamin Loeb, St. Louis rug dealer. Others were Dave Schaefer, Newton, Mass., a shoe manufacturer; John C. Tyler, Atlanta, Ga., a lawyer; Paul Warren, Shaker Heights, Ohio; George Polashian, West Hartford, Conn., and Joseph Vinocur, Cleveland.

Those waiting to be called as witnesses include Sidney Wyman of Las Vegas, Nev., formerly of St. Louis. Wyman identified himself as part owner of the new Havana Riviera Hotel in Cuba.

The investigation stems from a raid at Terre Haute, Ind., last Nov. 29 by agents of the Internal Revenue Service. Sterling M. Dietrich, Indiana director of the IRS, said the investigation is aimed at collection of the 10 per cent excise tax on wagers and gambling stamp taxes.

H. L. Hunt, wealthy Texan, was to have been a witness but he was scheduled for throat surgery today at Dallas.

180 IN MOROCCO SENTENCED FOR AIDING FRENCH

RABAT, Aug. 20 (AP) — A special government purge commission has sentenced 180 persons to national degradation and confiscation of property for collaborating with the French against King Mohammed V.

The sentences were announced today on the fifth anniversary of the beginning of Mohammed's two-year exile. He returned to end the French and Spanish protectorates over his country.

The commission ordered confiscation of the vast wealth of the late Pasha of Marrakech, Thami el Glaoui, and of most of his family, because he led the Moroccan collaborators. El Glaoui died in 1956 after trying to make his peace with Mohammed.

Mohammed's uncle who resigned as a French puppet in his stead, Mohammed Ben Moulay Arafat, got off with six years' degradation and a fine of 3,500,000 francs ($8332).

Sixty-six other principal collaborators with the French—including two of El Glaoui's seven sons and his secretary—were sentenced to 15 years' degradation and confiscation of property.

WOMAN SHOT TO DEATH IN QUARREL OVER AUTO

Mrs. Pearl Ellis, 4200W block of Page boulevard, was shot to death last night by an acquaintance in a dispute over an automobile. Leroy Brown, 1000 block of North Fourteenth street, surrendered later and signed a statement admitting the killing.

Brown, a Negro, said he and Mrs. Ellis drove to Prairie and Easton avenues to discuss the disposition of an automobile he had purchased three months ago. When he bought the car, he registered it in her name, he told police.

Brown said he got out of the car and walked around to Mrs. Ellis, also a Negro, who was seated behind the steering wheel. When she refused his request to get out, he shot her twice in the chest with a .32-caliber automatic. A park policeman, John Jackson, who was standing nearby, chased Brown and fired one shot at him, but he escaped.

ELLISVILLE PASSES SEWER BOND ISSUE OF $625,000

Voters of Ellisville approved two bond proposals for $625,000 for building sanitary sewers yesterday, while Shrewsbury voters rejected a $125,000 bond issue proposal for a municipal swimming pool and recreation center.

Ellisville voters approved issuance of $560,000 in general obligation bonds, 471 to 215, and issuance of $65,000 sewer revenue bonds, 466 to 215. The city tax rate, now 33 cents on each $100 assessed valuation, will go up to about $1.33 by passage of the bond issues, it was estimated.

In Shrewsbury, the vote on the swimming pool bonds was 972, yes; 585, no. The proposal failed by 66 votes to receive the two-thirds majority required for approval.

WHOLE REBEL BATTALION JOINS INDONESIA FORCES

JAKARTA, Aug. 20 (UPI) — An entire battalion of rebel troops—3000 men—defected to the government side in North Celebes, the Antara News Agency reported today.

The switch occurred after Indonesian government forces captured the hill town of Tomohon from the rebels, the agency said.

The battalion included former government troops, students and veterans of the old Dutch colonial army.

GREECE REJECTS LATEST BRITISH PLAN FOR CYPRUS

ATHENS, Aug. 20 (AP)—Greece rejected last night Britain's latest plan for solution of the dispute over the future of Cyprus.

Premier Karamanlis announced the rejection in a letter to British Prime Minister Macmillan.

Without the modifications suggested by the Greek government it will not serve the purposes you have proclaimed, Karamanlis told the British leader in a note relayed through Ambassador Sir Roger Allen.

In London, Macmillan called in Greek Ambassador George St. Seferiades and Turkish Ambassador Nuri Birgi for talks about the violence-ridden island colony.

No Change Proposed. A British spokesman emphasized Macmillan has "no intention of making any change in the announced policy."

Britain is seeking to put into effect a seven-year plan for communal self-rule in Cyprus. Macmillan sought agreements from the Greek and Turkish governments to defer any final solution at least until 1965 and in the meantime to co-operate in ending violence in Cyprus.

The Athens government is backing the claims of the Greek-speaking Cypriots for union with Greece. Turkey is supporting the campaign of Turkish-speaking Cypriots for partition of the island.

Britain announced some modifications of the plan for constitutional development in Cyprus last week and served notice it intended to apply the proposals with or without Greek and Turkish co-operation.

Karamanlis told Macmillan that since the agreement for a provisional solution had been frustrated, "Greece will continue with all legitimate means her efforts toward freedom of the people of Cyprus."

This means a return to Greece's original demand for an immediate application of the principle of self-determination.

The Greek Premier cited three points in criticizing the British plan for the island, in which Greek Cypriots outnumber Turkish Cypriots 4 to 1. Though Britain wanted both and Turkey to take a hand, he said no third government should be involved in the administration.

He contended that, instead of two separate (Turkish and Greek) houses of representatives, a single legislative assembly ought to be instituted to deal with all matters except those reserved to the governor. If the idea of two houses is to be retained, their authority ought to be limited to communal affairs, he said. He suggested that the numerical composition of the assembly correspond to that of population.

Stolen Stamp Stolen. SPARTA, Tenn., Aug. 20 (UPI)—A rubber stamp which said "Stolen from White County Athletic Association" was purchased Monday by county officials to mark equipment and uniforms. Coach Dee Harris reported yesterday that someone stole the stamp.

AUTO HITS POLE, 5000 EAST SIDE HOMES DARKENED

From 5000 to 6000 East Side homes south of East St. Louis were without power for 30 minutes to four hours last night. The failure occurred when an automobile struck a utility pole in the 2100 block of Monticello lane, Centerville Township, and severed a 34,000-volt line.

The cut line was a feeder to the Edgemont substation of Union Electric Co. Not being told of the accidental nature of the failure, the company attempted to switch the load to the Airport substation and burned out that line. A third line to the Pocket road substation also was out.

Three high school students, passengers in the automobile, were taken to Centerville Township Hospital for observation. They were Charles R. Carrico, 1301 Camp Jackson road, Centerville; Fred J. Davis, 732 Mildred avenue, Monsanto; and Robert H. Kofron, 769 Mildred avenue.

The hospital was without power for a time but no operations had been scheduled. It was not immediately learned who was driving the automobile.

CRITIC OF FOREIGN POLICY WINS IN WYOMING PRIMARY

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Aug. 20 (AP)—Dr. Gale McGee, a critic of the Administration's foreign policy, yesterday won the Democratic nomination for United States Senator from Wyoming. He will oppose Senator Frank A. Barrett in the November election. Barrett was unopposed for the Republican nomination for a second term.

McGee, a University of Wyoming history professor, rolled up 19,335 votes to 13,313 for Hepburn T. Armstrong, 37-year-old uranium executive, on the basis of returns of 590 of the state's 689 precincts.

In the same number of precincts, Barrett had 29,587 votes. Republican Gov. Milward L. Simpson easily won renomination for a second term as the state's chief executive, defeating Stanley Edwards of Laramie. Simpson failed to reappoint Edwards as state civil defense director when he took office four years ago.

J. J. Hickey, Cheyenne attorney, was nominated without opposition in the Democratic primary.

CORNING PRAISES PRESIDENT FOR LEBANON TROOP ACTION

President Eisenhower's action in sending troops into Lebanon was praised last night by Paul E. Corning Jr., Republican nominee for United States Representative in the First Congressional District. He spoke at a meeting of the Airport Township Republican Men's Club at 1024 South Florissant boulevard, Ferguson. "When the Middle East situation became critical," he said, "the President sent troops into Lebanon in time to preserve peace and law and order. The flames of civil strife, fanned alike by the Communists and some ambitious Arab leaders, were thus prevented from consuming Lebanon and Jordan and from threatening other countries of the Middle East."

"On the other hand, the Truman Administration did not let the Communists know that it would defend Korea until after the Communists had begun the invasion of South Korea. When the Truman Administration did make up its mind, the 'police action' followed."

GIRL DIES OF POLIO, CITY'S FIRST IN 1958

Kathleen Ann Harris, 11 years old, died of poliomyelitis at St. Louis Children's Hospital yesterday, the first death of a St. Louis child attributed to the disease this year. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Beverly E. Harris, 5414 Columbia avenue.

A St. Louis county resident, a 4-year-old girl, died of poliomyelitis earlier this year. Kathleen became ill Friday and entered the hospital Saturday. She had not received Salk vaccine. She attended Shaw School. Her father is owner of the St. Louis Publishing Co.

Joint funeral services for the girl and her grandfather, Clarence D. Harris, will be held at 3 p.m. tomorrow at Belderswien undertaking establishment, 3620 Chippewa street. Burial will be in Valhalla Cemetery. Mr. Harris died unexpectedly Sunday at his home, 4741A Morganford road. He was 67.

MRS. EISENHOWER SEEKING CHINA OF FIVE PRESIDENTS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower is looking for some chinaware. It's not that there is a shortage at the White House. The man who lived there before put in a 1000-piece set.

But Mrs. Eisenhower is trying to fill in a White House collection of pieces of china having personal association with all of the Presidents.

Going over and regrouping the collection in the White House china room, Mrs. Eisenhower and her staff discovered five missing crates: Andrew Johnson, William Howard Taft, Warren G. Harding, Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover.

White House records show those five Presidents made no purchases of china during their occupancy of the White House but used what their predecessors left behind.

So Mrs. Eisenhower is searching for pieces they owned privately to fill in the collection. She is hoping descendants of the five Presidents may be able to help.

JAPANESE LONGSHOREMEN AGREE TO UNLOAD MISSILES

YOKOHAMA, Japan, Aug. 20 (AP)—Yokohama's Longshoremen's union agreed tonight to unload a battery of guided missiles.

The government gave written assurance that the missiles were "not nuclear weapons." A union spokesman said the struggle against unloading "had been based on a misunderstanding." Japan brought the missiles from Switzerland.

But a "joint struggle council" opposing the missiles, made up of Communists, Socialists, and other leftist groups, announced it will "obstruct by force" the unloading.

RADIOACTIVE TEA IS OK'D

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (UPI)—The Federal Food and Drug Administration has ruled that radioactivity in a cargo of Japanese tea that arrived in New York last month is far below the dangerous level. The administration said the tea is safe for human consumption. The agency investigated after press reports said the Coast Guard had found "slight radioactivity" in the tea on the freighter Tancred.

ALGERIAN REBELS WARN OF FURTHER REVENGE KILLINGS

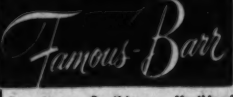

ALGIERS, Aug. 20 (UPI)—Algeria's rebel National Liberation Movement says it will carry out further "reprisal" killings on French soldiers captured in the Algerian war.

The FLN threat, in a letter handed over to French officials some time ago and made public today, said the death of Lt. Olivier Dubos was "a cry of warning."

The letter disclosed that Dubos, father of three children, was shot by the FLN last July 7. Addressed to his mother, it said he had been "executed by the FLN in retaliation for the death of rebel army Lt. Salhi Hocine."

The FLN warned that if Algerian rebels continued to die at French hands, more killings like that of Dubos would follow.

The death of Dubos, who was captured last February, roused a wave of anger throughout France. Newspapers carried angry editorials denouncing FLN "savagery."

MINERAL POTENTIAL OF STATE STRESSED

Current mineral exploration in Missouri points to "fantastic industrial possibilities for the state and its largest city," the Advertising Club of St. Louis was told yesterday.

James D. Idol, director of the division of Missouri Resources and Development, speaking before the club at Hotel Statler Hilton Hotel, said the magnetite-iron ore body at Pea Ridge in Washington county has a production potential of 2,000,000 tons annually with reserves estimated at 50 years.

The mine, which is now being developed, "could and should result in either the expansion of existing facilities in St. Louis to process this ore into steel or we should be able to create interest somewhere in the steel industry which will result in a new steel mill being built in this area," he said.

Idol also notes that Missouri's brown iron ores are receiving renewed attention and that a new $1,000,000 ore processing mill is under construction in Howell county, with most of its output going to Birmingham, Ala.

Extensive leasing of land in St. Charles and Warren counties and the fact that at least one test hole has been drilled gives evidence that some mineral has been found there although no announcement has been made, he said.

Discovery of a new body of high quality lead ore in the northwest corner of Iron county by St. Joseph Lead Co. has led to plans for construction of a new town to house about 2000 people in that area, he added. This body may eventually yield as much metal as has been taken out of the state in the last 50 years, he predicted.

Turning to general industry, Idol said the new $50,000,000 Plymouth assembly now under construction in St. Louis county will fortify Missouri's position as second in automobile assembly in the nation. With a developed steel industry, the state could become first in automobile production, he said.

U.S. SAILOR KILLED IN FIGHT WITH TURKISH CAB DRIVERS
ISTANBUL, Aug. 20 (UPI)—American sailor Larry M. Davis, 21 years old, of Wheaton, Ill., died from internal bleeding at a hospital here yesterday following a fight between blue-jackets and 12 Istanbul taxicab drivers.

Turkish authorities were holding four of the drivers for investigation. In a preliminary hearing yesterday it was related that Davis and five buddies, on liberty at Istanbul night spots, got into a fight with cab driver Orhan Talay over the fare and that other drivers joined in.

BARUCH 80; HIS AUNT 102
LONDON, Aug. 20 (UPI)—Bernard Baruch's aunt celebrated her 102nd birthday here today. He was 88 yesterday. Mrs. Malvina Zimm of the Kensington Park Gardens section of London, told newsmen, "I love life. I have kept myself busy and have always got something to do."

Comparison of Old and New Social Security Benefits

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (UPI).

THE following tables show how the new scale of social security benefits approved by Congress and sent to the White House yesterday compares with those now in effect. (Figures 1, 2 and 3 in parentheses refer to footnotes at bottom of tables.)

OLD-AGE BENEFITS
Monthly earnings	Present law	New bill	MAN AND WIFE (2)

(1) Worker 65 or over at time of retirement.
(2) Combined benefits of worker, and wife who goes on the rolls at age 65. Wife who goes on rolls before 65 (lowest possible is age 62) would draw lesser amount. Survivor benefits for a widow and one child, or for two surviving parents, would be the same as for man and wife.
(3) Not applicable since maximum average monthly earnings amount possible is $350.

Following is a percentage table showing the schedule of increases in social security tax rates under the new bill.

Year	Employers	Employees	Self-employed
1958	2 1/2%	2 1/2%	3%
1960-62	3	3	4 1/2%

1969 and thereafter	4 1/2%	4 1/2%	6 3/4%

Based on continuation of state and local contributions at present Missouri old-age assistance would be increased $2.17 a month, aid to dependent children $4 cents, aid to the blind $2.61 and aid to the permanently and totally disabled $2.41. In Illinois the old-age assistance would go up $4.38 monthly; there would be a 5-cent decrease in children's aid, $2.99 boost in aid to the blind and $2.79 for persons permanently and totally disabled.

British Prison Record. LONDON, Aug. 20 (UPI)—The average number of men and women in British prisons during the first four months of 1958 was 24,706, highest in English history.

3-YEAR HIGH ACHIEVED FOR MORTGAGE LOANS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—Mortgage lending activity by savings and loan associations reached the highest level in nearly three years in June, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported yesterday.

The board said June deposits with the Association exceeded withdrawals by the widest margin for any June on record. The estimated net savings inflow, including dividend credits, was estimated at $850,000,000. Mortgage loans closed during June were estimated at $1,104,000,000. This was 19 per cent more than in June 1957 and marked the second straight month in which lending activity by the associations exceeded a billion dollars. The June figure was the highest for any month since August 1955 when $1,171,000,000 in mortgages were closed. In the first half of 1958, the board said, savings and loan associations closed $5,288,000,000—almost 5 per cent above a year ago.

FRENCH CABINET OK'S DE GAULLE CONSTITUTION

PARIS, Aug. 20 (UPI)—The French cabinet approved today Premier De Gaulle's proposed constitution. The document calls for the strongest executive government in modern French history.

The cabinet took into consideration recommendations made by a 39-member constitutional consultative committee in adopting the final draft.

The constitution now will be submitted to the Council of State, France's highest legal body, for final approval. On Sept. 28, it will go before the voters of France and the overseas territories.

If it is accepted—as seems likely—there will be a new republic, the fifth since 1789, with a more powerful president and a weaker legislature.

If it should be rejected, De Gaulle has said he will retire once more to Colombey-les-Deux-Eglises in eastern France, thus conceivably paving the way for a military dictatorship.

Changes in Constitution. The 39-member consultative committee finished studying De Gaulle's proposals last week. Information Minister Jacques

Soustelle said these changes were accepted:

1. President of the republic in times of "grave national emergency" will have unprecedented dictatorial powers. But the cabinet accepted a committee recommendation that these powers should be granted only after consultation with a "constitutional committee."

2. The president of the republic will be elected by an electoral college embracing Parliament, overseas representatives, and local town committees. All told there will be 75,000 electors participating in the election, with the majority of them from the traditionally conservative provinces.

3. Overseas territories will be allowed to have their choice of becoming independent or being members of a commonwealth-type "community for overseas territories."

The president of the "community" will have a Senate as its legislative body and an "executive council" as its cabinet.

The cabinet kept De Gaulle's original proviso that government ministers must not be members of Parliament. Cabinet members will have to resign their seats if they are deputies.

General Election. If the Constitution is adopted, a general election will follow for a new National Assembly. There were reports this would be held Nov. 11.

De Gaulle left today on a 12,000-mile tour of France's colonial possessions to win support for his constitutional reforms. He flies first to Madagascar off the east coast of Africa.

He will offer independence to the 11 territories but will warn local politicians and the populace that if they decide to break away from France the home country will immediately cut off its heavy financial aid—10 per cent of France's total budget.

His choice of independence or association with continued aid already has caused a near-uproar in Africa where various local politicians accused him of "blackmail," giving them no alternative but to vote for his constitution or face an economic crisis.

De Gaulle's visit will include the main centers of the 4,082,506-square-mile African territories: Tananarive in Madagascar; Brazzaville in Equatorial Africa; Abidjan on the Ivory Coast; Conakry in Guinea; Dakar in West Africa and a three-day stop in Algeria.

25,200-FOOT PEAK CLIMBED

KARACHI, Aug. 20 (AP)—A Japanese mountain-climbing expedition sent word yesterday that it had scaled 25,200-foot Choghali Peak in the Karakoram range.

The heretofore unconquered mountain in the northern Jammu section of Kashmir is near the border of Sinkiang, the far northwest province of Red China. It is known also as Pride's Peak. Prof. Takeo Kuwabara, leader of the 13-man expedition, said in a message that the top was reached Aug. 4.

Falls Dead on Witness Stand. KEENE, N. H., Aug. (AP)—John J. Hasenauer, 71 years old, of Keene took the witness stand in municipal court today and informed the judge, "My doctor told me not to get excited." Hasenauer then collapsed and died of a heart attack.

GUARDSMEN EMPLOY PENTOMIC TACTICS
 By THEODORE P. WAGNER
 A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
 CAMP RIPLEY, Miss., Aug. 20—Realistic training by the 158th Infantry, St. Louis regiment, was evident in squad instruction in Pentomic tactics at this northern camp today.
 Dynamite blasts raised clouds of dust as the 11-man Pentomic-type squads dashed across fields and through woods in an attack on aggressor-held strong points. There were spirited blank-cartridge fire fights as the defenders moved forward and the aggressor enemy relinquished strong points.
 The actual field work was preceded by blackboard instruction and briefings. Instructors accompanied the attack, directing, controlling and correcting errors in the new formation of five-man fire teams.
 At the conclusion of each exercise the troops were returned to the initial point for a critique.
 Patience Needed.
 Patience and repetition are necessary to attain the perfection sought by regular army inspectors in the short period in camp.

 Briefing and blackboard sessions, although conducted in isolated, wooded areas of this large post, have many excellent instructional aids devised by the Army. At one stage of the briefing the men fire live ammunition through a hedge at silhouette targets representing enemy riflemen. The object is to spread the deadly fire, and not score too many hits in a single target.
 Similar fire is directed at stone fences and other targets illustrated on canvas. The instruction is designed to indicate where enemy snipers may be expected, and methods of eliminating them.
 Realism also was the feature of night tactical training conducted for three hours last night by the 158th. Although future wars presumably will be fought with nuclear weapons and unmanned missiles, the Army feels it may still be necessary to fight an adversary hand-to-hand.
 Luminous Weapons Used.
 The night instruction, employing luminous weapons and equipment, covered such subjects as night vision, walking at night, camouflage, signals by sound, security and identification, use of the compass and employment of silent weapons.
 Among the weapons, demonstrated by ghostly figures attacking shadowy victims, were the trench knife, hand axe, blackjack and the garrote. The training was directed by Lt.

Eugene F. Hinderbrandt, 443 Calhoun road, St. Louis county.
 Gen. Bruce Clark, four-star commander of Continental Army Command, arrived here late yesterday for an inspection of the 9000 Missouri-Kansas National Guardsmen forming the Thirty-Fifth Infantry Division.

TELEGRAPHERS CALL STRIKE AGAINST C.&N.W.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20 (AP)—The Order of Railroad Telegraphers last night called a strike of its 1,600 members on the Chicago & North Western Railway for 6 a.m. tomorrow.

G. E. Leighty, president of the union, said the strike was being called in a dispute over discontinued agency service by the railroad. The C.&N.W. operates in Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota, North Dakota, Wyoming and Nebraska.

Leighty said the dispute was initiated by a system-wide program by C.&N.W. to curtail agency service at its one-man stations. He said the union served notice last December that telegrapher positions must not be discontinued unless by agreement of the railway and union.

The union said the line eliminated 123 one-man stations in Iowa and South Dakota in the last month. Frank V. Koval, assistant to the railway president, said the union's demand would destroy all incentive for the C.&N.W. to improve its equipment and would waste funds on unnecessary personnel.

115 WORKERS ON STRIKE AT NIXDORFF-KREIN FIRM

About 115 employees of Nixdorff-Krein Manufacturing Co. 916 Howard street, were on strike today after company and union representatives failed to reach agreement on wages and pensions. The strike began last night at expiration of the contract.

Five unions involved in the strike, which halted operations at the plant, are: District 9, International Association of Machinists; Local 50, Building Service Employees Union; Local 13, Metal Polishers Union; Local 1, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; and Local 518 of the Teamsters. The company manufactures chains, hardware and athletic equipment.

HE'S ON HOT SPOT AFTER SETTING OFF AFTERBURNER

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Aug. 20 (AP)—Leslie Simms's curiosity about what happens when you press the afterburner button on a jet plane is now satisfied, and then some.

Simms is a crew chief from Cannon Air Force Base, N.M., who was brought to nearby Nellis Air Force Base for training. He knew that the afterburner is something pilots cut in when they need an extra surge of power, but until Monday he never had pressed the button.

So, according to a Nellis spokesman, Simms's curiosity finally got the better of him when he was taxiing an F-100 Super Sabre along a runway. He pressed the button and the plane rocketed across the runway, off the base, across a highway, spun to a stop, exploded and burned. The Air Force estimated the loss at $1,000,000.

Simms jumped out and was not hurt. The Air Force said he "is not available for comment." He is under strict guard pending investigation.

GOV. LEADER DEPLORES SPIRIT OF COMPLACENCY

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (AP)—Gov. George M. Leader of Pennsylvania said yesterday the national shock caused by the Russian Sputniks has faded because of "repeated doses of tranquilizers and soothing syrup administered by men in our national government who should have known better."

Leader told a Veterans of Foreign Wars convention the nation has sunk back into a spirit of complacency. "You're going to have to pay for national defense if you're going to survive, and that means more unbalanced budgets," he said.

Adm. Arleigh A. Burke, Chief of Naval Operations, told the meeting the United States should be more concerned with winning the world's respect rather than winning popularity contests.

WASTE OF $3,000,000 AT AIR BASE REPORTED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—Representative J. T. Rutherford (Dem., Texas), said last night the General Accounting Office has reported a waste of more than $3,000,000 at Holloman Air Force Base in New Mexico in connection with the construction of missile launching facilities.

Rutherford said that other reports obtained from the Air Force after the GAO finding was made tended to confirm that waste had occurred.

"One official practically confirmed to me that 'we goofed,'" Rutherford stated. He said that apparently unnecessary expenses occurred when the Air Force went ahead with construction of facilities that it could not or did not intend to use.

BRITAIN JOINS U.S. IN MILITARY AID TO JAKARTA

LONDON, Aug. 20 (AP)—The United States and Britain have shifted to a policy of giving the Indonesian government limited military aid in an effort to offset increasing Communist bloc influence, diplomatic informants in London say.

Indonesia has accepted a British offer to provide specialized training for some army officers, the sources reported last night. The United States signed an agreement in Jakarta last Wednesday to sell light arms to the southeast Asian island republic.

Some United States weapons already have been flown from Japan to Indonesia and a shipment of 300 trucks and jeeps plus arms will sail soon from Yokohama.

The United States-British decision to help President Sukarno's forces presumably was based on the reputation of top army leaders for being staunchly anti-Communist. The Communist party has polled the largest vote of any party in recent Indonesian elections, and army chiefs are reported worried by the Red upswing.

Many of the republic's army leaders have been trained in the United States, including the young chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Abdul Harris Nasution. They reportedly regard United States military equipment as best for their tropical climate.

Indonesia turned to Czechoslovakia and other Communist nations for arms last December when Washington failed for six months to answer Jakarta's requests to buy weapons. Some Communist arms already have arrived in the republic and Red jet warplanes were shown off recently by the Indonesian air force.

United States-Indonesian relations hit a low in the early days of the rebellion in the outer islands last February. Sukarno's government charged that the rebels were getting United States weapons. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, while denying the charge, implied that Indonesia was slipping under Communist control.

Since then Washington's ambassador in Jakarta, Howard P. Jones, has been carrying on a successful campaign to improve relations between the two governments, aided by increased United States economic grants. In Sydney, the Australian government announced it had approved the supply of American arms to Indonesia. External Affairs Minister Richard Casey said they were for internal purposes only and not suitable for an attack on Dutch New Guinea.

However, the Sydney Sun said in an editorial the move put the Dutch in West New Guinea in a very bad situation "and ultimately they may have to pull out."

The Sydney Daily Mirror said if a war broke out between Indonesia and The Netherlands over West New Guinea, "Australia would find herself very deeply involved."

"Does Dulles seriously think he can wean Sukarno from Russia by outbidding her with weapons?" the Mirror asked.

Indonesia Concerned by U.S. Marines in Singapore.

JAKARTA, Aug. 20 (UPI)—Foreign Minister Subandrio summoned United States Ambassador Howard Jones today and expressed Indonesia's anxiety over the arrival of 2000 United States Marines in Singapore.

At the same time the Jakarta press issued fresh warnings against American "intervention" in Indonesia and suggested that Indonesia was the target of the Marine landings. Jones assured Subandrio the Marines had landed in Singapore only for rest and relaxation and that they had no connection with the Indonesian rebellion.

33 TRAFFIC DEATHS IN ILLINOIS LAST WEEK; DROP OF 12

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 20 (UPI)—The state Traffic Safety Division said yesterday 33 traffic deaths were reported in Illinois for the week ended Monday, compared with 45 in the same week last year.

This brought the total so far in August to 80, compared with 116 in the same period last year. For the year so far, the total now stands at 1024 deaths, compared with 1276 to this point last year.

The 33 deaths reported last week included four late reports—two from Cook county and one each from Whiteside and Stephenson.

The week's total also included eight deaths in Cook county, seven in Lake, two each in Boone, Logan and Kankakee and one each in Iroquois, Tazewell, Christian, Rock Island, Washington, Douglas, Henry and Whiteside.

KEEL LAID FOR SCORPION, ANOTHER ATOM SUBMARINE

GROTON, Conn., Aug. 20 (UPI)—The keel of another atomic submarine, the Scorpion, was laid today at the Electric Boat yards of General Dynamics Corp.

The 250-foot Scorpion is of the Skipjack class and will be a fast attack boat. The keel was laid on the ways from which the huge radar-picket submarine Triton was launched yesterday.

The first of the fast attack subs, Skipjack, was launched last May 26 and will be ready for sea trials late this year.

SPEED IN BUILDING JET AGE AIRPORTS DEMANDED OF CAA

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—The House Government Operations Committee told the Civil Aeronautics Administration yesterday to speed up development of airports for the jet age.

A report issued by the committee said airport operators have testified they were not kept informed of requirements for acceptance of jet planes. "CAA should seek closer coordination with airlines and aircraft manufacturers and keep airport operators informed on matters affecting airport requirements," the committee said. The committee acknowledged that changes in jet aircraft have made it difficult for CAA to issue a revision on runway lengths. However, it concluded that CAA could nevertheless have issued the revision before now, making commercial jet flights possible in two more months.

Martin Has Blood Clot. WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (UPI)—A leg ailment which has troubled House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. of Massachusetts, has been diagnosed as a blood clot in a vein, he said yesterday. Doctors told him the clot may have stemmed from a fall.

COLLISION FATAL TO 49 LAID TO AIR FORCE, CAA

The New York Herald Tribune—Post-Herald Tribune. WASHINGTON, Aug. 20—The Civil Aeronautics Administration and the Air Force were accused yesterday of virtual negligence in the mid-air collision of a military jet and an airliner over Nevada last April 21 which took 49 lives.

The accusation came in a 37-page report, signed by all five members of the Civil Aeronautics Board, which conducted an extensive investigation of the collision, in clear weather, of a United Air Lines DC-7, and an F-100-F Air Force trainer jet.

Forty-two passengers and five crew members of the DC-7 and the two pilots in the jet-trainer were killed in the crash about nine miles from Las Vegas. The Air Force was flying a heavily-traveled transcontinental air corridor. The trainer came from nearby Nellis Air Force base.

Airlines Not Notified. The investigation disclosed that although 500 to 800 take-offs and landings occurred daily at Nellis (400 of them by trainer-jets), and many of these flights "penetrated" the commercial air corridor, the Air Force neither notified the airlines of take-offs and landings, nor did it keep track of commercial air traffic passing directly overhead.

The CAA, the report also disclosed, had approved these jet "penetrations" of the commercial corridor, but never notified United or any other airline using the corridor of the agreement. United, on the other hand, had protested to the CAA many times of "near misses" with military craft in that area.

Without naming James T. Pyle, CAA administrator, the CAA report said bluntly that the administrator knew the "extent and nature" of training flights from Nellis Air Force base, and added:

"Yet, no action of any kind was taken by the administrator, even after he had received complaints from United Air Lines. The record shows that the administrator did not approach the military in an effort to reach a voluntary agreement to alleviate the situation nor was any attempt made to relocate the airways or to provide additional facilities for the jet-penetration procedures."

"It was not until after the accident that a joint CAA-military survey team was created to review military activities throughout the country, and to re-examine the jet penetration procedures used by Nellis Air Force base."

The report went on to say that if the Air Force had refused to make safety changes, "the administrator's statutory duty . . . clearly requires him to bring such matters to the (CAA's) attention. This was not done."

CAA said testimony showed that while United was aware of the dangerous situation in the area near Nellis, it could only protest to CAA and demand that something be done. The report said:

"The board believes that United's action was proper, and that it was reasonable for the company to expect that appropriate corrective action would be taken by CAA."

The C. A. B., which is an independent agency, is generally charged by law with drafting policy and procedures for aircraft operations in the United States. CAA, which is an arm of the Commerce Department, is supposed to carry out C.A.B. policies and procedures.

No comment was available here from Pyle or other CAA officials, and none came from the Air Force.

The Las Vegas collision, and another not long afterward between a National Guard trainer jet and a Capital Air Lines plane, over Maryland, which killed 11 on the airliner, and one of two pilots in the jet, aroused President Eisenhower and Congress.

Agency Bill Passed. The President, in a special message to Congress, asked for a new federal air agency to control both civilian and military air traffic. Many of Mr. Eisenhower's suggestions were incorporated in a bill which was passed late last week.

The bill, which sets up the federal aviation agency, now is on the President's desk. He has until Aug. 26 to sign it, and its provisions will go into effect, some of them on a staggered basis, 30 days after signature.

The CAA will be absorbed in the new agency, as will the Airways Modernization Board, an executive agency. It will also assume some of the C. A. B.'s authority. C. A. B. members who signed yesterday's report are: James R. Durfee, chairman; Chan Gurney, Harman D. Denny, G. Joseph Minetti and Louis J. Hector.

Says Electronic Sky Tracks Will Halt Collisions. LOS ANGELES, Aug. 20 (AP)—A prediction that electronic sky tracks will eliminate commercial airplane collisions was given yesterday at the Western Electronics show and convention.

Carl Eric Granqvist of Stockholm, Sweden, international vice president of the sponsoring Institute of Radio Engineers, said such a system would be similar to the inertial navigation device used on the United States atomic submarine Nautilus in its under-the-ice transpolar cruise.

"Air traffic, particularly when the jet age is fully upon us, will become so dense that we will need a system that will lay invisible tracks in the sky," he said. "This inertial navigation device, when employed in connection with a radar ground checking system, would eliminate air collisions."

SURGEON'S HAND AND LIGHT CORD SAVE MAN'S LIFE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 20 (AP)—A knife in the ungloved hand of a surgeon and an electric light cord helped save the life of 31-year-old Donald C. Clancy last week.

When Clancy's heart stopped beating, an intern began artificial respiration. Dr. Robert C. Love, chief surgery resident, was called.

Dr. Love seized the only knife in the emergency room and opened the man's chest. He began squeezing Clancy's heart slowly.

Until he was brought sterilized gloves, Dr. Love used his bare right hand. An anesthesiologist put a tube in Clancy's lung to assist him in breathing.

The message and artificial respiration finally started the heart on an intermittent beat. It was decided the heart had to be stopped and restarted.

Dr. Love grabbed a light cord, ripped it from its fixture and plugged it into an outlet. The loose wires were exposed and applied directly to Clancy's quivering heart. It worked. The heart stopped briefly, then began beating normally.

Clancy is still in critical condition but his doctors say he has a chance to recover.

EX-POLICEMAN IS INDICTED ON BURGLARY, THEFT COUNTS. An indictment charging former Patrolman William M. Fehr with burglary and stealing was returned yesterday by the circuit court grand jury.

Fehr, who was assigned to the Magnolia avenue district, resigned July 16 following his suspension on departmental charges of leaving his beat and drinking on duty. He is 36 and had been a policeman 31 years.

He had been charged in warrants with stealing $231 from the Hall Drive-It-Yourself office at 3331 South Grand boulevard. Fehr denied the burglary and stealing the money but admitted he was 14 blocks off his beat and was in the vicinity of the rental agency early July 18, date of the burglary.

OCEAN CITY, N. J., Aug. 20 (AP)—A priest and two friends lost their lives yesterday when a heavy sea swamped a 26-foot cabin cruiser trying to make port here after a day of fishing.

The chop was so deep that the overturned hull of the cabin cruiser was hidden in the waves for an hour. Three persons clung to it. Seven others, clinging to cushions and wreckage were swept to sea and rescued later by a Coast Guard boat after the accident was finally spotted by a private boat which aided in the rescue.

The dead were all apparently struck on the head as the cabin cruiser flipped over. They were: Edward McHugh of Pennell, Pa., owner of the boat, The Rev. Vladimir Firczak of St. Peter and Paul Roman Catholic Church, Bethlehem, Pa., and Clarence Jewell, also of Bethlehem.

SEEKS INQUIRY ON DELAY IN HUNT FOR KLM PLANE

LONDON, Aug. 20 (AP)—A member of the British parliament called today for an inquiry into the delay in starting the search for the Dutch airliner which crashed in the Atlantic last week. All 98 persons aboard the KLM plane died in the crash 100 miles off the Irish coast.

R. Gresham Cooke, Conservative, in a letter to the Daily Telegraph, pointed out that the last radio contact with the plane was made at 4:40 a.m. but that no search plane took off until 12:20 and the wreckage was not sighted until 2:45, some 10 hours after the crash.

Part of the delay was due to emergency rescue operations being called off after the airport at Gander, N. F., thought it heard a broadcast from the missing plane.

"Even allowing two and one-half hours for the mistake made by Gander," Cooke wrote, "this (10 hours) seems an unconscionable time to find wreckage only 100 miles from our coast. I hope there will be a full inquiry into the reasons for the delay in getting rescue operations moving."

THREE LOSE LIVES AS SEA SWAMPS CABIN CRUISER. OCEAN CITY, N. J., Aug. 20 (AP)—A priest and two friends lost their lives yesterday when a heavy sea swamped a 26-foot cabin cruiser trying to make port here after a day of fishing.

The chop was so deep that the overturned hull of the cabin cruiser was hidden in the waves for an hour. Three persons clung to it. SUPERHIGHWAY PROGRAM PASSES HALF BILLION MARK

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—The nation's superhighway program passed a half billion dollar milestone last month, highway administrator Bertram Tallamy reported today.

Tallamy said that between the program's start in mid-1956 and the end of July construction contracts were completed on 1932 miles of express roads. The cost: $506,000,000, or nearly $250,000 a mile.

The program calls for eventual construction of a 41,000-mile road net linking all parts of the country. The Federal Government pays 90 per cent of the costs and the states the rest.

As of July 31, Tallamy said, construction of 3159 miles was under way. These projects will cost about $1,770,000,000.

Settlement of Jordan Crisis To Cost American Taxpayers About $125,000,000 a Year

Figure Covers Shoring Up of Economy and Military Establishment and Not Long Term Improvements — Hussein Could Become Another Chiang.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright 1958, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Aug. 20.

WHILE THE AMERICAN TAXPAYER has not yet heard about it, the United Nations settlement of the Jordanian crisis, if it finally comes off, will mean a bill to be paid by the Government of the United States at the rate of about $125,000,000 to $200,000,000 a year.

This is the estimate of the U.N. secretariat planning the recommendations which Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld will take with him when he goes to Amman and Beirut. The figure which the U.N. staff has arrived at is based solely on the cost of shoring up the economy and the military establishment in Jordan. It does not cover any of the long term improvements which must come if the whole operation is to be anything more than a mere standstill arrangement for maintaining a precarious stability.

The British have made it quite clear that they can pay no part of the bill for stabilizing the regime in Jordan. They are paying the cost of sustaining their own troops there and they have said that they can do no more. Not so long ago they paid for a large share of the Jordanian military establishment when Glubb Pasha, out of another and simpler era, was the real power in the country. The cost was about $90,000,000 a year.

In Washington's lap. But that day is never far off as the Macmillan government in London proceeds to cut its losses and scale down the forces still committed in odd corners of the earth. So the Middle East, by the end of Washington's lap. The U.N. "presence" is a beneficent disguise, but the responsibility must be assumed by the United States if it is to be met.

This should really surprise no one, for it is a process that has been going on ever since the end of World War II. Several references have been made in this little talk to President Truman's resolute action in taking responsibility for saving Greece when the Communists with help from across the border were waging a threatening civil war.

That necessity was abruptly deposited on the American doorstep when the British, whose responsibility that area had been for many decades, found they could no longer afford it. The burden of worldwide order-keeping was simply beyond the island kingdom in the aftermath of a war that had largely depleted its external assets.

Cyprus, too. Moreover, with Jordan as the latest example, the United States can expect this to go on happening. For many months the British have been saying that they must soon pass on or, in any event, share the heavy cost of maintaining the air base on Cyprus and keeping the warring Turks and Cypriotes from annihilating each other. Only the fact that this blood feud continues to tear the island apart has prevented the British from trying to work out some solution that will relieve them of a charge that comes due with monotonous regularity.

While the responsibility for putting together the pieces in Jordan seems to fall inevitably on Uncle Sam, who must backstop the U.N., it would be wise to note that this can develop into the kind of situation all too familiar in other parts of the world where the American government is engaged in shoring up an uncertain present in order to avert a threatening if not a catastrophic future.

To put it another way, the baby just never grows up. For reasons complex and varied in each instance the dependence on American help seems to be unending. In this connection Formosa, South Viet Nam and South Korea are the wards that essentially come to mind.

An Object Lesson. Here is an object lesson in relation to Jordan. Merely by paying the going cost, up to perhaps $200,000,000 a year, it may be possible to keep this essential buffer in existence. But without very much larger expenditures to try to make it a vital and going concern the prospect is for an indefinite guardianship.

And it is not pleasant to think of King Hussein in the role of another and younger Chiang Kai-shek. That will, of course, be the easiest way out when with some semblance of stability the British troops have departed and the crisis is no longer in the headlines.

Lebanon, which was before the current troubles a thriving commercial community, is relatively simple. The Lebanese have asked for $100,000,000 in American aid to restore economy, and while this may be too much, as Washington is now saying, it will be primarily a task of rehabilitation that will have a terminal date.

In Jordan a new entity must be put together. If this is merely a patching job with the temporary props held in place by American aid, we shall see another uneasy guardianship that can have no end except the negative one of holding off disaster.

And as the bill for such guardianships grows larger and larger, the taxpayer may eventually come to feel that the whole business is a waste of money.

A.B.C. on Major Changes Voted In Social Security Program

Everyone Under It to Be Affected—Most of Provisions Will Not Take Effect Until Jan. 1.

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP).

THIS IS AN A. B. C. on the five major changes just voted by Congress in the Social Security program. President Eisenhower is expected to sign them into law shortly.

Most changes will not go into effect until next Jan. 1. They involve everyone under the program. They cover a higher Social Security tax and higher payments to retired workers. Also included are bigger payments to survivors of deceased workers, disabled workers and needy persons.

Employers and employees both have to pay a social security tax. For each it now is 2 1/4 per cent on the first $4200 of a worker's annual earnings, or a maximum tax of $94.50 a year paid by both employers and employees.

On Jan. 1 the tax goes up to 2 1/2 per cent on the first $4800 of earnings, or $120 paid yearly by both employers and employees. This is an increase of $25.50 a year.

The self-employed now pay a tax of 3 1/2 per cent on their first $4200 of annual earnings. After Jan. 1 they will pay 3 3/4 per cent on the first $4800.

Aid to the Retired. Retired workers now drawing social security payments will get a 7 per cent boost in checks they receive after Feb. 1.

Their payments now range from $30 a month to $108.50. Under the new law they will get from $33 to $116. This applies to retired workers already drawing payments before Jan. 1.

Those going on the retirement rolls after that date will receive from $33 to $127, although it will be some years before anyone starts drawing as much as $127.

Retired workers' wives who are eligible for payments because of their age will get a 7 per cent boost in their checks, starting Feb. 1.

If a worker reaches 65, re-ments as the widow of a worker will receive an increase in her monthly check of about 7 per cent after Jan. 1.

Monthly payments to the widow of a worker—if she has a child under 18—now range from $45 to $162.50. Payments to her will go up to a minimum of $53 and a maximum of $190.60. What she gets will be based on her husband's earnings, of course, as in the case of all widows.

A widow with two or more children under 18 now gets payments ranging from $80 to $200. They will go up to a minimum of $93 and to a maximum of $254 a month.

Now a covered worker—if he is at least 50 years old and is totally disabled—gets a payment equal to what he would have drawn if he had reached 65 and retired. His dependents—a wife and children under 18—have been getting no payments.

Under the new law they will—the same amount they would have received if he had reached 65 and retired. The wife of a disabled worker—if there is no child under 18—can get no payment until she has reached 62.

Assistance to Others. About 5,600,000 persons not otherwise covered by the social security program get Government help. These are the needy aged, people too blind to look after their cows. For five

WASHINGTON.

WHILE President Eisenhower was in New York debating, in effect, with the representatives of dictator Nasser, a lot of people in Washington wished they could debate with the "Democratic dictator" of the House of Representatives, Congressman Howard Smith of Virginia.

Congressman Smith, however, is difficult to debate with: first, because for almost a week he was absent; second, because he believes in power regardless of debate.

The Congressman will on occasion debate the "Love Life of Raccoons," or he will harangue Congress about the extravagance of printing government cookbooks, though he himself introduced a bill for printing 110,000 copies of a government publication on "diseases of the horse," but most of the time he simply says "no," without much debate.

As chairman of the Rules Committee and head of the Dixiecrat coalition in the House, his "no" can be both potent and persuasive.

Smith is one reason the Democrats find it fairly easy to elect a President, but difficult to elect a President, for Smith, a nominal Democrat, goes down the line for Republicans. He also believes in putting himself ahead of both the Democratic party and the majority vote in Congress.

Losers to Smith.

Last week, for instance, Smith put himself ahead of several million city dwellers who need more housing; ahead of several million who need loans for better sewage, more water, factory relocation, and public works; ahead of four Southern states which need more electric power through the Tennessee Valley Authority.

To sidetrack this legislation, Smith simply disappeared. He has three dairy farms in northern Virginia, and he went off to look after his cows. For five

U.S. Expands Diplomatic Staff As Africa Grows in Importance

Many New Nations Emerging — Julius Holmes, Retired General, Likely to Head New State Department Office.

By DANA ADAMS SCHMIDT

C. New York Times News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.

DIPLOMATS OF THE UNITED STATES foreign service are in the thick of carrying out this country's expanding interest in Africa.

President Eisenhower, acting under authorization voted by Congress a month ago, is expected soon to name a new assistant secretary of state for African affairs to head a staff of 351, of whom 77 will serve in the department and 274 in Africa. Julius C. Holmes, a retired brigadier general who served as United States minister to Tangier in 1955, is the leading candidate for the post. He conducted a survey of the continent for Secretary of State John Foster Dulles last year.

The widening interest the State Department is giving Africa recognizes that continent's growing political and economic importance, and parallels the attention it is getting from the Soviet Union and other Communist countries and neutralist Egypt. As country after country achieves independence the forces of East and West are competing for the political affections of Africans.

In the last 12 months four new consular posts were opened, at Abidjan, French West Africa; Yaounde, French Cameroons; Mogadiscio, Italian Somaliland, and Kampala, Uganda. Six more are to be set up in the next 12 months, at Marrakech, Morocco; Freetown, Sierra Leone; Kaduna, Northern Nigeria; Brazzaville, French Equatorial Africa; Tananarive, Madagascar, and a sixth point still undecided.

Deputy Assistant Secretary Joseph Palmer Jr. is in charge of the entire operation until an assistant secretary is named. Until Congress created a separate assistant secretary for African affairs Palmer was under William Rountree, assistant secretary for the Near East, South Asia and Africa.

Nucleus of Specialists. He has begun forming a nucleus of African area specialists who will not serve exclusively in Africa but may expect to return to that continent again and again.

At present the department has two of its younger officers training as African specialists at Northwestern University and two at Boston University. Seven more officers will probably be sent to these or other universities in the next 12 months.

Meanwhile, the Foreign Service Institute has begun teaching Hausa, the most prevalent language of West Africa. Instruction in Arabic is already in progress and some posts in Africa are conducting courses in Amharic and Afrikaans.

Since there are about 600 different languages and dialects in Africa many educated Africans learn either English or French and these are be-

Bonn's Foreign Aid Program For Needy Nations Shaping Up

$100,000,000 to Be Diverted From Reconstruction to Finance Capital Goods Exports.

By ARTHUR J. OLSEN

C. New York Times News Service.

BONN, Aug. 20.

A FOREIGN AID PROGRAM designed to pump substantially more West German capital goods into underdeveloped countries is in the final stage of preparation.

The Bonn program is modest in extent and contemplates no grant of aid other than the existing $12,000,000-a-year technical assistance undertaking. However, it is hoped that the plan in full operation will permit needy customers of West Germany to carry several hundred million dollars in capital imports on an easy terms, long-payment basis.

The program arises from Bonn's consciousness of a political and moral obligation to assist countries in urgent need of industrial development. The fact that the federal republic's balance of payments surplus with such countries has reached almost unbearable size has added a spur of self-interest to the aid planners.

Division of Funds. The heart of the new program is the diversion of about $100,000,000 from the domestic reconstruction field to the financing of capital goods exports to underdeveloped lands.

The actual creation of a revolving fund awaits parliamentary approval in September of the economic co-operation ministry's budgeting of Marshall Plan investment funds.

Sixty million marks—about $15,000,000—will be converted from Marshall Plan counterpart money. The export credit fund will be boosted to 280,000,000 marks ($62,000,000) by subsequent advances from the same source and to about 500,000,000 marks by recourse to the private capital market.

The money will be used to afford underdeveloped countries up to eight years to pay for capital and finished goods imports from West Germany. Under present arrangements, export credits are available for a

Letters from the People

Answering Mr. Crowe

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
In answer to James E. Crowe's defense of License Collector Hayden:

The facts are clear:

1. The Merchants and Manufacturers tax as now set up has more potential advantage for "trading" political favors for political support or "contributing" than for raising tax revenue with unquestioned, equitable fairness.

2. Administered by meticulously honest servants of all the people, the M. & M. tax will tide the city over until it is ultimately given the same rule it should be enjoying now but for "the Machine."

3. It took a grand jury to expose mere samples of the abuses, even suspicions of which no responsible public servant in the office of license collector would have tolerated.

4. Members of "the Machine" have condoned the abuses uncovered by the grand jury and have accepted moral responsibility for such abuses as accessories after the fact by arranging new political jobs for those who were condemned by the grand jury as unfit.

5. To presume that carrying out the recommendations of the grand jury is sufficient to reinstate public confidence in a license collector whose careless executive irresponsibility made the grand jury investigation into these abuses necessary in the first place, is an insult to the intelligence of the people of St. Louis. It is a typical example of prevalent brazen disregard of the essential elements of responsible respect for public confidence.

6. To make a point of claiming that no combination exists between one politician and unscrupulous meddlers who have the same common purpose of promoting selfish, personal power advances, is like suggesting that Democrats have no business co-operating with Republicans to improve city government only because Republicans have opposed Democrats at times.

People in the state offices of St. Louis city government have been destroying all efforts to improve local government for many years.

Has the time come for thoughtful Democrats to join hands with responsible Republicans to clean out the state-office breeding places of cancerous infection that has been dangerously crippling our city government all these years?

Or is party loyalty still more important than sound, sensible city government?

Arthur E. Johnson
Republican Candidate for Prosecuting Attorney

Where to See Cats

I, too, have long lamented that your top-notch cat photographer, Lester Link, does not occasionally lend his talent to the cause of cats.

However, I would like Reader Rosina San Paolo and others who are interested, to know that cats do come from their own at the Ferguson Country Fair, which is to be held in Ferguson on Sept. 2, 4, 5 and 6.

At that event, dozens of cute, cuddly little kittens will be awarded to children as game prizes. And so the kittens won't get lonesome, there will also be canaries, parakeets and white mice.

To Revive Softball

The Metropolitan St. Louis Softball League Association deserves to be highly commended for sponsoring the recently completed Western Regional Softball Tournament.

This was an exceptional and exciting event which brought back fond memories of organized softball which began here some 25 years ago. It was a real treat to see some very fine ball teams which played excellent and interesting games. St. Louis had, and still has, some top-notch ball players, men as well as women.

It is this writer's sincere hope that this will bring forth a revival of the softball interest of the past years when many organized teams fielded forth in various softball parks. It is also the sincere hope that this tournament will again bring about the revival of the possibly the national tournament to the not too distant future.

This should serve as an incentive for some good organized leagues for St. Louis next summer. A traveling league would be a means of additional interest, I am certain.

Again, hats off to the umpires! Who says they aren't good guys?

Progress In Reverse

With the garbage being picked up once a week, as proposed, there will be more rats than St. Louis ever saw before. Instead of advancing we are to become the stunted City of St. Louis.

Mrs. Nicholas M. Hunt

Words But No More Dollars

During the closing days of the congressional session some most disturbing statements have been made about the national defense by leading Democrats. Senators Kennedy, Symington and Lyndon Johnson in particular have warned that the nation faces peril in the years ahead.

In what was widely hailed as a brilliant speech last week, Senator Kennedy compared the predicted loss of American superiority in nuclear striking power to Britain's loss of Calais 400 years ago. Sounding the alarm for what he saw as "the most serious test in our nation's history," the Senator invoked the great words of Winston Churchill:

Come then—let us to the task, to the battle and the toil—each to our part, each to our station . . . Let us go forward together in all parts of the land. There is not a week, nor a day, nor an hour to be lost.

Senator Symington struck an even more ominous note. He charged the Administration with "a negative approach to the realities incident to the growing danger and our position vis-a-vis the possible enemy." He warned against "the beginning of a form of appeasement which, unless it is stepped on now, may mark the eventual death of this country." He contended that "efforts are being made to prevent the American people from knowing the truth." He declared that the United States faces a situation similar to that faced by Britain in the late '30s, and invoked the Prayer Book of his church:

We have left undone those things we ought to have done and we have done those things which we ought not to have done.

Majority Leader Johnson, who headed the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee which investigated the defense situation after Sputnik I, added his powerful voice. He said the defense effort ought to be going further and going faster. He recalled the finding of his subcommittee that Russia leads in missile development, number of submarines, and scientific progress. He quoted the 17 recommendations which the committee had received for stepping up the defense program.

Disturbing as these expressions were, the timing of them was equally so. Why is it that this profound and eloquent concern for the national defense was expressed in words but not in significant action?

Why is it that the alarm was sounded on Aug. 14 and 15, but not on July 30, when the Senate was considering in effect the very pace and extent of our preparedness program in the year ahead?

On July 30, the Senate had before it the bill appropriating 40 billion dollars for defense in the 1958-59 fiscal year. If the situation is as critical as Senators Kennedy, Symington and Johnson now say it is, why were they not battling on the Senate floor for a much larger appropriation than 40 billion dollars?

It is true that the defense appropriation as passed by the Senate represented an increase of 1.4 billion dollars over the Administration's original request. But in their alarming speeches last week Senators Kennedy, Symington and Johnson gave no hint of any belief that 40 billion would do the job. The implication of their remarks was that much more is needed.

There is no record that Senator Kennedy offered any amendment to increase the funds. Senator Symington told the Senate he had advocated an increase of something less than 2 per cent in committee, but he made no fight on the floor, not wishing, he said, "to take the time of the Senate by offering amendments which are certain to be defeated." Nor did Senator Johnson make any effort to increase the defense funds recommended by the Appropriations Committee. On the contrary, as majority leader he was primarily responsible for the fact that the bill was passed by the remarkable vote of 71 to 0.

What is the country to believe?

If Senators Kennedy, Symington and Johnson considered a 40 billion dollar defense effort inadequate on July 30, why did they not alert the country and conduct a floor fight for a much bigger appropriation?

If Senators Kennedy, Symington and Johnson two weeks later sincerely believe that the defense situation is as alarming as they say it is, why are they not straining every muscle to keep Congress in session until it votes adequate funds for a greater effort?

"Not a week, nor a day, nor an hour to be lost," said Senator Kennedy. Does the Democratic majority believe that? Or is it just campaign oratory?

Yet not a word has come from Julian Spotts, chief of the National Park Service staff at St. Louis, nor from the architect, Eero Saarinen. Mr. Saarinen must care what his fellow architect and museum director, Mr. Nagel, thinks about the proposed destruction of St. Louis's oldest building.

It is hard to believe that a resourceful designer could not adapt the revised plans so as to preserve the Rock House, perhaps even arrange the grand staircase around the old building. But time is passing and the dirt fill is coming closer.

What do Mayor Tucker and the officials of the memorial organization think of the plan to wreck the Old Rock House? Now would be a perfect time to speak up.

Fourth Choice—and Best

The proposed constitution of the French Fifth Republic may be much more acceptable to French overseas possessions—and especially to Algeria—if its final version contains a provision suggested by Paul Reynaud's parliamentary consultative committee which currently is studying the draft.

As it was sent to this committee, the constitution would give the people of such territories three choices: 1—they could elect to retain colonial status; 2—an area could become a department of France; 3—or it could become a member of a somewhat vague new French federation over which Paris would continue to exert authority in major fields.

A committee of French African political leaders at once protested that these alternatives did not offer independence now or in the future, and thus were unacceptable. The Algerian rebels have long insisted that they would negotiate with Paris only on a basis of independence.

The Reynaud committee would give the overseas areas a fourth choice, membership in an association of free states. It also would provide for changing from one status to another by mutual consent. Unless strings are tied to this new alternative, it would seem to offer the equivalent of membership in the British Commonwealth, or at least dominion status.

If reason is not overcome by war-bred emotion, this would seem to be the ideal solution even for Algeria. It would mean national independence while largely preserving the economic, military and cultural advantages of association with Paris. It could serve both self-interest and honor.

Dashed Expectations

Americans who expected this Congress, at least, to try to reform labor-management relations have had their hopes dashed by 198 Congressmen. The Kennedy-Ives labor bill was defeated by 198 votes to 190 in the House, under rules that required a two-thirds vote for passage.

Nothing has been done to improve the Taft-Hartley labor law since it was passed 11 years ago. But after the McClellan rackets inquiry, the public had good reason to expect action this year. The Senate passed the non-partisan labor bill, 88 to 1.

Who is to blame for its demise in the House?

The Teamsters union, the United Mine Workers, the National Association of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States lobbied against the bill, for different reasons.

House Democratic leaders share some of the blame because they refused to push the bill until the last minute, and then called it up under rules preventing amendment.

House Republicans share the blame because, twice as many of them as Democrats voted against the bill. Among them was Representative Curtis of Webster Groves, only Missouri Congressman to stand against the measure. Many of the Republicans hoped to make a campaign issue out of the death of labor reforms, and hence were willing to preside at the funeral.

But labor reforms are not a partisan matter. Defeat of the Kennedy-Ives bill is a defeat for majority opinion, and every voter who feels the loss will want to inspect the roll call to see how his own Congressman voted.

Baseball as Played in Books

Novelist Says List of Good Writing on Game Is Short; Praises Ring Lardner

James T. Farrell in The New York Times
Book Review

Now and then someone asks me, "When will the great novel about baseball be written?" Such questions are unanswerable—or rather, answers are meaningless. Great books are like accidents, and their subject-matter cannot be predicted.

But it well may be that the great, or at least the definitive, work of fiction on baseball has already been written and that readers keep forgetting about it or keep paying it mere lip service.

I refer, of course, to Ring Lardner's "You Know Me, Al."

Unfortunately, Lardner stood almost alone in his field—and baseball, which has so large a place in our national life, has strangely only a small place in our literature, which is the poorer for it.

The reasons for this—aside from Lardner's genius—reside in the faulty patterns set in our first baseball books, in editors' blindness to the dimensions of the subject, in hackneyed ideas perpetuated in formula stories, and in our cultural shortcomings.

The first baseball books were written for boys—and one of the earliest popular writers for this audience was Gilbert Patten, whose pen name was Burt L. Standish. Standish was outstandingly bad as a writer but he achieved what some literary artists have failed to do—he gave a name and a typed character to our language and culture.

His Frank Merriwell books present a hero who is too impossible for words. Superior to Standish was Zane Grey, who wrote "The Red-Headed Outfielder" and some short stories. Grey had skill in popular writing, and he heightened interest by the use of oddities, another element in the pattern of baseball fiction.

Improvements in the conception and quality of baseball writing were made by sports writers. The late Charles E. Van Loan was one. His prize fight and baseball stories have vividness, pungency and at least the elements of characterization.

Van Loan read some of Lardner's sketches and sent them to George Horace Lorimer, the editor of The Saturday Evening Post. Thus the beginning of "You Know Me, Al," published as a book in 1916.

During the years that Lardner was with the Chicago Daily Tribune, he covered both the White Sox and the Cubs. Chicago was a great newspaper city in those days, the late nineteenth hundreds—and its sports writers were outstanding.

In those days prior to World War I, of course, small towns were far different from their present-day counterparts. The quality of education was poorer, and the number of boys who received little or no education was large. Baseball, as Ty Cobb has pointed out, gave such boys a chance to improve themselves.

One of them, a scarcely illiterate White Sox pitcher, became the model for Lardner's bushy, Jack Keefe.

Lardner saw his bushy from the standpoint of a man of sensibility, aware of values and possibilities of experience which Jack Keefe could never understand. Lardner knew what it was to come from the small town, and to break in, because he had himself broken into baseball, though as a writer.

Virginia Woolf, a woman of the finest sensibility but ignorant of baseball, recognized the indigenous

American quality in Ring Lardner, and even compared him to the Elizabethans. "With the quickest strokes, the surest touch, the sharpest insight, he lets Jack Keefe . . . cut out his own outline."

She wrote that Keefe was one of a society going its own way, interested in its own concerns. She further observed that Lardner's best writing was about games. "Games give him (Lardner) what society gives his English brother."

Baseball figures incidentally in the writing of some of Lardner's literary contemporaries. Sinclair Lewis wrote a brief description of Babbitt going to a ball game, but Babbitt was not a real fan and stopped attending games after a week.

Thomas Wolfe was as passionate about baseball as he was about everything else in America and in the universe. In "You Can't Go Home Again," Wolfe drew an accurate and convincing portrait of a veteran ball player, Nebraska Crane. His details were good.

Among baseball fiction writers of the last five or six years, Mark Harris, an English teacher in a California college, has become the most prominent. He is a practicing novelist who does not confine himself solely to baseball, but he has published two novels, "The Southpaw" and "Bang the Drum Slowly," as well as a novelette, "A Ticket for a Seamstress," on the subject.

Other recent baseball novels rating some mention include "Man on Spikes" by Elliot Aisimov, "The Only Game in Town" by Charles Einstein and "The Ballplayer" by Ed Fitzgerald, editor of Sports Magazine.

Nelson Algren has written a few reminiscent sketches of boyhood baseball memories—among the best of his writings. Charles Maxwell wrote a touching recollection of the 1919 world series in this vein.

Unhappily, the last of good writing about baseball is short. Before any resurgence of writing in the Lardner tradition can take place, writers must view the game afresh as a complex as well as colorful human situation. Only then can the dimensions of character be drawn and the tones of feeling sounded.

High Cost of Sitting

We are pleased to learn the Missouri House of Representatives is going to be comfortably seated next session. Representative Harry Smith of Saline county, chairman of the committee on supplies, has ordered

From The Pleasant Hill (Mo.) Times

187 leather-upholstered swivel chairs at $200 each. We are not complaining, but this seems to point up once more a theme we have been bemoaning a long time—that a small one-house legislature would cost less to operate. The Senate isn't mentioned in the news item about this purchase, but you can bet your bottom dollar that if the House is going to sit in $200 chairs the Senate will sit in nothing a nickel cheaper.

Between Book Ends Hawaiian Story

AN ISLAND KINGDOM PASSES. by Kathleen Dickenson Mellen. (Hastings House, 387 pgs., $5.50.)

As the question of statehood for Hawaii keeps popping up in Congress, the story of these islands' annexation to the United States becomes more vital to every American citizen. This book tells that story.

Mrs. Mellen, a Virginian, went to Hawaii in 1922, married there and soon became interested in the Polynesians, native Hawaiians. She described in three earlier books their gradual subjugation from their first encounter with Captain James Cook in 1778 through the years of effort to protect themselves from immigrant hordes that became cheap plantation labor. "An Island Kingdom Passes" is the last volume in her saga of the royal Hawaiian dynasty.

Mrs. Mellen has been unprejudiced in this account, but she shows graphically how the Hawaiians were cheated out of their homeland as were millions of helpless people by greedy nations during the nineteenth century. An era of invading imperialists and buccaneering business barons. That was the fashion of the times, and Hawaii was not to escape.

The "sugar barons" needed American protection for their products, and the "Annexation Club" was organized in 1892. It was strongly opposed by native Hawaiians, but in 1898 President McKinley signed the Organic Act, making Hawaii a territory of the United States.

Upon hearing of the act, former President Cleveland, who had turned down the annexation plan, is credited with saying, "Hawaii is ours . . . as I contemplate the means used to complete the outrage, I am ashamed of the whole affair."

But the Polynesians accepted annexation as a new way of life. "And it was American. Not the America of the imperialist and the robber baron, but that of courageous men and women who a century ago, with unbounded faith and confidence, had moved westward, singing, across the plains." Iola F. Johnson

One Out of Ten

THE TROUBLED CHILD, by Helen Moak. (Holt, 176 pgs., $3.50.)

Although one out of every 10 children is said to suffer from a serious emotional disturbance, there are fewer than a thousand qualified child psychiatrists in the country. Helen Moak, who is the mother of an emotionally sick child, wrote this book mainly for the guidance of parents.

Since, as she points out, the emotional problems of the neurotic child are only exaggerated forms of those common to all children, every parent could benefit from reading this book. It is written in a journalistic style, with very few personal references. If one of the several case histories Mrs. Moak gives is her own daughter's, it is not evident to the reader. How to Get Out of Jordan?

AS OF THE MOMENT, THE CRUCIAL QUESTION is how to make an arrangement which will extricate the British troops who are now in Jordan.

They were flown there in order to protect the King and his government against a coup like that in Iraq, and the problem is how to take them out again without leaving behind violent disorder and a very possible Palestinian war. Thus far, the Russians and the Nasser, fully aware of the Anglo-American predicament, have done nothing to open the way out. They have been calling for unconditional withdrawal. This would be a humiliation which they would enjoy. But it would also bring chaos and violence which the Soviet Union, in her own interest, should wish to avoid.

President's Plan Vague.

The immediate issue, on which the neutrals who are listened to in Moscow might use their influence, turns on the Soviet Union's agreeing to some arrangement under the U. N. which permits an orderly withdrawal from Jordan, and of course from Lebanon.

As against this, we shall, I believe, have to realize that the real issue was not met by President Eisenhower's proposal for a U. N. peace force to replace the British troops. For the British troops are in Jordan to preserve King Hussein's government.

It is not conceivable that two-thirds of the General Assembly will vote to recruit a peace force to maintain King Hussein's government.

The President's proposal was, of course, vague. But it has the inherent defect of the Eisenhower Doctrine, which is the fallacy that the problem in the Middle East is external military aggression whereas in fact the problem is internal revolution.

Ending King's Reign.

The official thesis, which was implicit in the President's speech, is that the American troops are in Lebanon and the British troops are in Jordan to defend these small countries against attack from beyond their frontiers.

In fact, the troops are not guarding the frontiers. They are protecting the governments in the capital cities against rebellion by native forces, assisted, of course, from outside.

but primarily internal in character.

These truths are fully known to most of the General Assembly, and therefore a proposal which ignores them will not be agreed to.

'We Are in a Bad Way.'

It is hard to see, therefore, how the U. N. can be induced to maintain order in Jordan except under some plan which combines the withdrawal of the troops with the liquidation of the King's government.

It is not enough for the West to say that the British troops will withdraw if a U. N. force will come in to take their place. The U. N. cannot and will not maintain this status quo, which is inherently untenable and unstable.

The U. N. might, if the great powers had the vision and the will to promote a settlement, preside over a new status for the people and the lands of Jordan.

Failing that, we are in a quandary. We are in a bad way if the British stay in Jordan to protect the King, and if we stay in Lebanon to keep the British company.

We are in a bad way if we withdraw and let Hussein's government collapse.

There are great difficulties in the way of a peaceable and honorable resolution of the fix we are in.

Our Frozen Diplomacy.

On the Russian side, there is the temptation to prolong the fix, giving us no help at all in working our way out of it.

On our side, there is our frozen diplomacy, which inhibits us from opening up a serious negotiation with Moscow about the roles of the great powers in the Middle East.

Yet until and unless such a negotiation takes place, there is no prospect of a stabilization and there is every prospect of a dangerous and rapid deterioration in all the positions still held by the West.

LORD GODDARD, CHIEF JUSTICE OF BRITAIN, RETIRES

LONDON, Aug. 20 (AP)—Lord Goddard, the Lord Chief Justice of England, heard his last case today.

He was sitting on a case dealing with gambling in a pub when the announcement of his retirement, effective Sept. 29, came from Prime Minister Macmillan's office.

The 81-year-old Chief Justice gave no sign that this was his last session as he strode briskly into the courtroom. This was the court's final session for the summer.

He rejected the pub's appeal, holding its lottery was not for a worthy cause.

"The law," he said, "has always been at pains to prevent licensed premises (pubs) being used for gaming."

Lord Goddard, in his 12 years as England's Chief Justice gained a reputation as a stern jurist but a stout defender of individual rights.

CATHOLIC CENSUS PLANS DISCUSSED

Archbishop Ritter Calls for 100 Pct. Co-operation by State's Parishes.

Final plans for the Missouri Catholic census were discussed last night by Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter of St. Louis at a dinner meeting of archdiocesan bishops and laymen at Forest Park Hotel.

Archbishop Ritter stressed the need for 100 per cent co-operation of every parish in the state, stating that the census will bring a "great awakening" in the church and a greater appreciation of it. The census will be conducted Sept. 23 to Oct. 11.

Prelates who attended the dinner included Bishop John P. Cody of Kansas City-St. Joseph, Bishop Charles H. Helmsing, Springfield-Cape Girardeau, Auxiliary Bishops Glennon P. Flavin and Leo C. Byrne of St. Louis and Msgr. Gerold J. Kaiser, who represented Bishop Joseph M. Marling of Jefferson City.

Laymen at the dinner were introduced by Circuit Judge David A. McMullan, census program chairman. About 30,000 laymen will call at more than 434,000 dwellings in the St. Louis archdiocese in taking the census.

Purpose of the census, which will be conducted by the Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Men, is to obtain information that will be helpful in planning future needs for Catholic parishes and schools. The council is headed by J. Stuart MacLellan with Eugene J. Sullivan as archdiocesan census chairman.

The Man Obliges

The St. Louis all-stars, the gray and great of local big league baseball history, left the field to applause that was as warm as the weather at Busch Stadium on a steamy night of nostalgia.

In the Cardinals' dugout, where Stan Musial stopped, a legend now once again an active player, Frank Frisch patted him on the back.

"Hit one for the Old Flash, Stanislaus."

Musial nodded. "Right, Uncle Frank," he said.

Frisch still was dressing, perspiration coursing down his chest like a swollen spring stream when there was a muffled roar from the stands. Word came quickly that Musial had hit his first home run in a month, a drive into the right-center field pavilion in the first inning.

Frisch grinned and Ken Williams, flexing his fingers around an imaginary bat, joined in the old guard's appreciation of the quick salute by a fellow member of the St. Louis dream team. Slender, silver-haired Williams is 70, the oldest of the All-Stars. The most youthful, Red Schoendienst, 35, was busy helping Milwaukee win another pennant.

Musial's homer brought to mind an observation by George Sisler as the all-stars dug into fried chicken. Dinner was served in the ball park apartment built by Bill Leach in the Dodier street structure that used to house the dear departed Browns' offices.

Sisler, hitting coach of the Pirates now, was contending quietly that too many prep teachers—and too many youngsters themselves—built up a complex against hitting the curve ball.

"The breaking ball, if you'll look at it and not where you expect to hit it, is as easy to hit as the fast ball," said Sisler. "With your own form, that is, and not someone else's."

George smiled. "Saw a kid in the Northern League recently," he said. "The boy crouched like Musial, and his hips like Stan and did everything like him—except hit."

Of Gelbert, DeLancey

The frosty-topped old-timers enjoyed themselves in a manner suggested elsewhere on the sport pages by Neal Russo, who stuck as close to the All-Stars as their uniform shirts on the muggy evening.

Here and there, though, seriousness crept into the comedy. Frisch, for instance, remembered at one point two border Cardinals whose careers were cut short, Charley Gelbert's by a gunshot wound that damaged his left leg, and DeLancey's by tuberculosis.

Gelbert played shortstop and Redbird pennant-winning ball clubs in 1930-31. DeLancey caught for Frisch's clubhouse gang in 1934.

"If those two boys hadn't been lost before they reached their prime," Frisch said, "the Cardinals would have won even more pennants."

Freeze's Hot Bat Chills Phils, Could Ice Job as Regular Homers Aid Birds' 5-4 Win

By Jack Rice

Nature gave Gene Lewis Freeze the confidence of a whale in a minnow net. When he joined the Cardinals this summer after a haphazard three-and-a-half-season stint at Pittsburgh Freeze studied the Cardinals' shortstop—a month situation. He announced that if someone would hand him a bat he would drive away all the pretenders to the position.

He was handed the bat. He has taken over at shortstop. A 5-to-4 Cardinal victory over Philadelphia last night at Busch Stadium was an outstanding example of the Freeze factors that could become major considerations for Cardinal brass this winter.

These days Freeze is hitting like a man making a home for himself. His fielding leaves the home-site up in the air and that will never do. Baseball is a down-to-earth game. Before spring training begins it is a good bet Cardinal Thinkers will decide to try Freeze as an outfielder. The idea occurred to Pittsburgh Thinkers.

As an outfielder "I was fast enough to cover up mistakes I made playing a guy wrong or judging a ball," Freeze said. "But I goofed a couple of times. I liked playing the outfield. You don't have to think as much as you do at shortstop. You've got to think all the time at short."

Whatever he was thinking, Freeze in the third inning dropped a throw that would have been the second out. Richie Ashburn was on first base, teasing Pitcher Wilmer Mizell. Wilmer's throw to first base is the biggest Little League motion in the majors. Ashburn broke for second. Mizell came erect as deliberately as a dowager feeling an ice cube slip down her back, and threw to First Baseman Stan Musial.

Musial threw to Freeze covering second. Ashburn was out except for one Cardinal technical difficulty. Freeze dropped the ball. Wilmer was no candidate for misplaced sympathy when Ashburn went on to score. Mizell walked two of the next four men he faced.

Vinegar Bend has a case of the pitcher's miseries. He knew where the plate was but he couldn't prove his knowledge. Pitches that might have gone over the plate met a Philly bat first. The Phils made seven hits and all their runs off Mizell in four and one-third innings. Solly Hemus hit a first-inning homer and Wally Post did all the other damage. Post homered in the fifth after Bob Bowman doubled. Post singled home Ashburn in the third. Willie Jones was Mizell's savior in that inning.

With Ashburn's run in and the bases loaded on the two walks and Post's single, Jones had a three ball, one strike count. He swung at the next pitch and hit a fly to left for the third out.

Mizell's woes remained Freeze's for a run's worth though until the eighth. That's when Philly starter Jack Sanford walked pinch batter Irv Noren, and Freeze hit a home run into the left field bleachers. He has homered in three successive games, in four of the past five games, and is hitting .454 for the five games.

Catcher Hobie Landrith homered against Relief Pitcher Dick Farrell in the eighth to win for the Cardinals. Landrith's homer was his third and when he was congratulated by a passing Cardinal, Hobie said his homer wouldn't have meant much without Freeze's. While they made polite bows to one another on that score, down the aisle Stan Musial was explaining the National League hitting race. He leads it again.

Musial had three hits in three times at bat, including a first-inning home run. In the third, Freeze, Musial and Boyer singled successively for the only Cardinal run that wasn't the result of a homer. The night's batting raised Musial five points, to .346. The former leader, the Phils' Ashburn, had one hit in four times at bat and fell a point, to .342.

"I'm hitting in streaks now," Musial said. "As players get older they do that."

Some of the younger ones do, too. Freeze had been reminded that one of his former teammates at Pittsburgh, Dale Long, two years ago hit home runs in eight successive games.

Uniforms Not Uniform, but Greatness Is for This Dozen

Brushback Nicks Stan's Thumb and His Temper

That most temperate of men, Stan Musial, acquired a black-and-blue thumb and a red neck against the Phils' Jack Sanford last night.

His fourth time at bat, after three successive hits against Sanford, Musial's thumb and forefinger were all that came between his helmet and a baseball pitched by Sanford. Musial did a lot of ducking to keep it that safe.

Musial's struggle to control his temper was obvious as he picked himself up from the dirt in a quick movement. His lively irritation was obvious to the Phils' Solly Hemus, too, when Musial bowed him over breaking up a double play. Musial doesn't consider himself exempt from the brush-back. But it had been served once before, and that must have seemed sufficient to him. His third time at bat, Musial got a single on a liner that almost lifted Sanford off the mound.

Robin Roberts (12-11) is scheduled to pitch for the Phils tonight against the Cardinals' Billy Muffett (4-4).

Bob Mabe relieved Wilmer Mizell in the fifth with two runs in, a man at second base and one out. Mabe pitched two and two-thirds innings of shutout relief. He wasn't the winner but he could consider the performance a step back toward a starter's role.

Tuesday night's attendance for the combination of an appearance by the All-Time St. Louis team and a game between the current Phils and Cards was 17,851.—J.R.

Emily's Pride Wins Sedalia Trot Feature

SEDALIA, Mo., Aug. 20 (AP)—Emily's Pride had little trouble winning both heats of the $6169 Breeder's Heats feature of the Grand Circuit racing program at the Missouri Fair yesterday.

Owned by Castleton Farm and Walnut Hall Farm of Kentucky, Emily's Pride scored her eighth victory in 12 starts this year by winning the first heat in 2:04.1-5 and the second in 2:04. Yankee Lass was second both times.

Emily's Pride is given a strong chance to win next week's Hambletonian trotting classic at DuQuoin, Ill. Her driver, Flick Nipe, let Yankee Lass set the pace in both heats, then turned her loose for driving finishes.

Miss Gunderson Wins Thriller On 19th Hole

DARIEN, Conn., Aug. 20 (AP)—Joanne Gunderson, the defending champion, knocked in two pressure putts today to defeat Mrs. Charles Spaulding of Greenwich, Conn., on the nineteenth hole of their third round match in the Women's National Amateur golf championship.

Joanne, the tall, unemotional daughter of a Seattle carpenter, played a brilliant recovery shot from under a pine tree on No. 18 to save a half and prolong the match. Then on the extra hole she chipped up out of the rough and banged in a five-foot birdie putt as calmly as if she were playing a practice round.

Miss Gunderson joined former champion Marlene Stewart of St. Paul, Minn., Canada, 1956 runner-up Mrs. Ann Casey Johnstone of Mason City, Ia., and United States Curtis Cup Star Anne Quast of Everett, Wash., among the early winners of the day.

Blond Barbara Romack of Sacramento, Calif., the 1955 United States champion, and Mrs. George Valentine, the Scottish veteran who won her third British Women's championship this year, also advanced to the fourth round.

Miss Romack, playing shaky golf, won out over Mrs. Mary Ann Reynolds of Albany, Ga., 2 and 1. Mrs. Valentine, with one over par golf for 12 holes, whipped Priscilla Buckley of Camden, S.C., 7 and 6.

Mrs. Streit survived a rather poor round to defeat Mrs. Allan Ryan of Locust Valley, N.Y., 3 and 2. Mrs. Johnstone defeated Mrs. Paul Dye Jr. of Indianapolis, 4 and 3. Miss Quast defeated Mrs. John Pennington of Buffalo, 3 and 4.

Kathy Fawcett, St. Louis District tournament finalist last week, was defeated here yesterday by Berridge Long of Huntington, W. Va., 7 and 6. Mrs. George Conant, the St. Louis District champion, had been eliminated in her first-round match Monday.

Doris Phillips of Belleville, entered but did not compete.

Patterson Says He Plans to Defend Title Once More This Year

D'Amato Opposes Bout With Folley

By W. J. McGoogan
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 20—Floyd Patterson plans one more defense of his heavyweight boxing championship this year, he said before departing for his home in Mount Vernon, N.Y., after his third success in protecting his title against Roy Harris here by stopping the Cut and Shoot, Texas, heavyweight in the twelfth round.

The opponent, the time and the place are still to be determined, Patterson's manager, Cus D'Amato said. It is expected the bout will be against one of the leading contenders and for an independent promoter, probably Emil Lence of New York. Lence promoted the bout between Patterson and Tommy (Hurricane) Jackson, Patterson's first after he won the title. Floyd gained the championship by defeating Archie Moore in the final match of an elimination tournament.

The champion appeared at a press conference yesterday morning showing few effects from his bout the previous night except a small lump over his left eye.

He said he didn't regard his showing against Harris as one of his better efforts. This was due, perhaps, to the fact that he had not fought in a year. He remarked that he would like to fight again soon, "not next week, but next month."

The champion said he had the impression that he had not been knocked down in the second round by Harris but that there was so much argument about it that he decided in favor of a knockdown to end the discussion.

Referee Didn't Count.
Some observers felt that Patterson went to the floor more from a push by the left arm of Harris than from a blow, but Patterson had been hit with a right hand before he went down and while the referee, Mushy Callahan, didn't count, the knockdown timekeeper got to three.

Patterson had been knocked down in a peculiar manner. Pete Rademacher, who was behind him in the ring, when they fought in Seattle.

Floyd was asked why he thought these things happened to him and he replied: "They're due to my own clumsiness, I guess."

He said he thought the referee should have stopped the fight with Harris before he did, but that Callahan had stated, before the bout started, that he would not stop it unless a man's own corner asked him to do so.

That was done by Bill Gore, trainer of Harris.

Patterson said that had anyone seen the condition of Harris' face as he did, he would have agreed it should have been stopped earlier, possibly after the tenth round.

"You couldn't help but have some pity," said the champion, "although it didn't keep me from trying for a knockout. I did switch my attack to the lower part of his face."

Admires Harris.
He paid tribute to Harris for his gameness and ability and said he thought Roy would do real well against any of the other leading contenders.

There was some talk of a rematch but there was no reason for it. Harris just does not have the equipment to cope with a boxer of Patterson's ability and another match would likely result in the same kind of ending, only quicker. D'Amato turned thumbs down on conversation of a bout with Zora Folley, who recently kayaked Rademacher, because of Folley's association with the International Boxing Club with which Cus is feuding.

But Bill Swift, manager of Folley, spoke up and said that he wished to state that Folley was available to fight Patterson for any promoter agreeable to D'Amato. But Cus gave no indication that his mind had been changed.

Harris, still suffering from the beating he took, nevertheless spent the day visiting friends after he had his cuts closed with 14 stitches and spending some time in an episode bath to take away some of the soreness. His left hand was badly bruised and swollen from a blow he landed in the third round, he thought.

Nothing was said about his plans for the future but his close to Roy expect him to continue boxing with the idea of re-establishing himself as a future opponent for Patterson.

His wife, Jean, said she

Baseball Greats Have Fun With Fans And a Ball Behind the Scenes, Too

By Neal Russo

The greats of St. Louis baseball returned to the scene of their prime last night. They had lots of fun on the field as the enthusiastic and appreciative fans rocked the park with applause, and they had a ball behind the scenes, too.

From the time fellow members of the all-time St. Louis All-Star team greeted king-sized Dizzy Dean with friendly insults at a pre-game party until the last man was out at the post-game celebration, the old gaffers never acted their age.

It was like Christmas in August, too, as the old Cardinals and Browns eagerly opened boxes containing replicas of uniforms they wore in their heyday. It was in the hot, small dressing room that the stars of yesterday laughed the most.

Loudest of all, as expected, was Frankie Frisch, who yelled, "Get these American League so and so's out of here, they'll get our signals."

O' Ditz, who admitted to only 259 pounds in his size-48 pants and size-50 shirt, was the butt of most of the clubhouse cracks.

Weighty Problem.
Referring to the convertible in which they were to ride, Frisch quipped, "I told them to put 20 extra pounds in that tire. If you were that big when we were pitching, I'd never been hit by those line drives."

Dean, calling attention to Frisch's paunch, countered with, "I'm not going to pitch with that kind of support."

Earlier Ditz had told Frisch, "If I was on the mound now, it'd look like there was four second basemen out there."

Joining the All-Stars in the clubhouse was Gusie Busch, one of the Cardinals and one of the Cardinals.

He was the Cardinals and one of the Cardinals.

Dodgers-Braves Story: Too Much Drysdale, No Buhl

Don Beats Leaders For the Fourth Time

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 20 (AP)—Too much Don Drysdale and no Bob Buhl. Maybe that's the answer for that 11-6 edge the Los Angeles Dodgers hold over Milwaukee's National League leading Braves.

Buhl was the Braves' Dodger beater. He whipped 'em eight times in 1956, when Milwaukee lost the pennant but held a 12-10 edge over the champion Dodgers for the season. Last year, when the Braves finally won the flag, Milwaukee again was 12-10 against the Dodgers, and Buhl was 4-1 against 'em—the only Milwaukee pitcher to beat the Dodgers more than twice.

In the past two years, Milwaukee had a 24-20 record against the Dodgers. Buhl won half of them, while losing but two.

But Buhl now is disabled by shoulder trouble. He hasn't pitched since May 13.

Now add Drysdale to the picture. The right-hander, who was to have been the Dodgers ace, lost seven of his first eight decisions before coming around. Since then he's won seven of 11 for an 8-11 record—with half of those victories against the Braves.

Fact is, he's taken seven in a row from Milwaukee, going back to June 27, 1957. And who beat him then?

A guy named Buhl.

Braves' Streak Ends.

Drysdale did it again last night, winning the opener with a five-hitter while Southpaw Johnny Podres spun a four-hitter in the nightcap for a 4-1 and 7-2 two-night doubleheader sweep. That junked the Braves' winning streak at seven, trimmed their lead to six and a half games and left the Dodgers all alone in fourth place with their seventh victory in eight games since quitting the cellar.

Second-place San Francisco beat Cincinnati, 4-3, in 10 innings, third-place Pittsburgh defeated the Chicago Cubs, 4-3, and the Cardinals downed Philadelphia, 5-4, in the other N.L. games.

In the American League, the first-place New York Yankees lost their fourth in a row, 8-6, to Cleveland. Chicago's second-place White Sox won their sixth straight, beating Boston, 7-1. Washington spilled Detroit, 3-1, and Kansas City swept a two-night pair at Baltimore, 4-1 and 6-4.

Neal's Homer Does It.

Charlie Neal hit his twenty-first home run, a three-run poke, and Drysdale hit his fifth for the Dodgers in the opener, handing Carl Willey, Buhl's replacement in an 8-4 record and ending his winning string at six. Billy Bruton's third homer counted the only Milwaukee run.

Norm Larker's two-run homer, his fourth capped a four-run second that bagged the nightcap against young Joey Jay (7-5), but the Dodgers added three more in the sixth, two on John Roseboro's tenth homer. Podres (11-10) had a shutout until Hank Aaron hit his twenty-sixth homer with a man on in the seventh, but Johnny had a tough time of it. He walked eight.

An error and Willie Kirkland's triple won it for the Giants. Southpaw Johnny Antonelli (14-10) was the winner with a five-hitter and became the first pitcher to homer in the San Francisco ball yard. Hal Jeffcoat (5-8) was the loser in relief. Starter Bob Purkey, who had allowed the Giants but one run in 51 innings stretching back to 1955, left trailing 3-1. Pete Whisenand drove in all the Reds' runs, two with a homer that tied it in the ninth.

Two-run homers by Bill Mazeroski and Dick Stuart did it for the Pirates, with Stuart's tenth the clincher in the sixth off loser Taylor Phillips.

Another for Donevas.

Donovan, who has won seven of eight for the White Sox since the All-Star game, didn't walk a man and struck out five for a 10-11 record. Jackie Jensen had half the Red Sox's hits, a second-inning single and a fifth-inning home run, his thirty-third. Jim Piersall's first homer in the eighth, and Ted Williams' two-out single in the ninth were the only other Boston hits.

Frank Sullivan (9-7) was the loser, Luis Aparicio tripled and scored on a passed ball in the first inning. The White Sox then got the clincher in the second on a walk, error, infield out and a single by Nellie Fox. Jim Rivera hit a two-run homer for Chicago in the seventh.

The Indians, now just .004 percentage points shy of fourth place Detroit, handed the Yankees three runs on errors in a hitless fourth inning, then took it on Rocky Colavito's tying, three-run twenty-eighth homer in the fifth and Vic Mertz's two-run homer in the seventh.

Roy Sievers drove in the first two Washington runs. He hit a solo home run—his thirty-fourth, one behind A.L. leader Mickey Vernon of New York—in the first inning off loser Herb Moford (3-5).

The Athletics didn't have a hit for five innings off Milt Pappas in the opener, then scored three runs in the sixth on four singles as Ned Garver won his eleventh with a five-hitter. Pappas is 7-7, losing four in a row. A three-run fourth won the nightcap as the Athletics collected 15 hits and Murry Dickson won his ninth with relief help. Gene Woodling drove in three runs for the Birds, two with his twelfth homer.

Glennview, Ill., Pitcher Stars in Tournament

WICHITA, Kan., Aug. 20 (AP)—A lefthanded pitcher from Illinois stole the show at the National non-pro baseball tournament last night.

Al Stegman checked Angler, N.C., on seven hits in pitching Glennview, Ill., to a first round 8-2 victory. Seldom in trouble, he struck out 10 batters and walked only two. He also was Glennview's top hitter, driving in four runs with two hits.

In other games, Lexington, Ky., ousted New Brunswick, N.J., from the double elimination tournament with an 8-6 second round victory, and Milwaukee defeated West Point, Miss., 7-2 in a first round game.

Herrscher Homers

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 20 (UPI)—St. Louisan Rick Herscher was one of four Austin players to hit home runs as the Senators defeated San Antonio, 7-3, in a Texas League baseball game last night. Herscher's blow came in the sixth inning with none on.

Other Austin home runs were hit by Peanut Lowrey, Dick Slinic and Ron Bottler.

'Los Angeles Fans Better Than Brooklyn's'—Jackson

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (UPI)—Maybe it'll be considered heresy in Flatbush, but ex-Dodger Randy Jackson says the fans in Los Angeles are better than those in Brooklyn.

Jackson, purchased by the Cleveland Indians from the Dodgers three weeks ago, claims the two things about Los Angeles that "can't be beat" are the weather and the fans.

"That doesn't mean that Los Angeles fans never boo anyone," Jackson explained, changing his sweatshirt after infield practice. "But generally speaking, they are exceptionally fair and they're not the kind of 'wolves' that you often find in Brooklyn."

"Those Los Angeles fans turn out in droves," he added, "and they don't walk out in the seventh or eighth innings even when the Dodgers are eight-nine runs behind, of course, big league baseball is still novelty to them. They still don't know too much about the game. Certainly, not as much as the fans in Brooklyn."

Getting around to the Dodger ballclub itself, Jackson said that injuries hurt the team more than anything else this year.

"Injuries, plus the fact that no one on the club is having a real good year," he said. "Frankly, I don't think the

Senators Suggest A.L. Franchise for Minneapolis-St. Paul

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 — (UPI)—Ten prominent senators, headed by Hubert H. Humphrey (Dem.), Minnesota, today suggested that a franchise should be granted to the Minneapolis-St. Paul area if the American League expands to 10 teams.

In a letter written by Humphrey to Will Harridge, president of the American League, the Minnesota Democrat pointed out "the twin cities have a vast trade territory, populated by avid sports fans and with a particular interest in baseball."

"The atmosphere for a major league team in the upper midwest, and particularly Minnesota, could not be better. Every one wants a team. This is particularly true in the twin cities area, where excellent stadium facilities are already available and are about to be expanded."

Musial Is Chairman For Benefit Game

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (UPI)—St. Louis Cardinals star Stan Musial has been named chairman of the 27th annual football game benefit at Yankee Stadium, Oct. 19, for needy cancer victims at the American Medical Center in Denver.

The game will be the home opener of the New York Giants, who will meet the Chicago Cardinals. This will mark the twenty-seventh year that the Giants have set aside a large allotment of tickets for the support of the non-sectarian medical center.

In the Ozarks

Ozark Sportsman and Outdoors Writer.

The Missouri dove season opens Sept. 1. The Conservation Commission decided on a 50-day split season—the same as last year. The first phase runs through Oct. 10 and the second period will be from Nov. 10 through Nov. 19. The daily bag limit remains at 10 but the possession limit is doubled to 20. Shooting hours are one-half hour before sunrise to sunset. Shotguns and bows and arrows are the legal weapons.

Howard Wight, the commission's dove biologist, using data from the 1958 roadside census, estimated that the number of doves has declined about 10 per cent from last year's figure. Wight said that it still is just 14 per cent below the 11-year high set in 1955 when the average count was 3.66 doves per mile. The census covered 1191 miles over 106 different routes.

It is doubtful that the dove hunter will find any difference between the dove population this year and that of last year. The 10 per cent loss will have but little, if any, effect on the number of birds brought to bag. Most dove hunters will head for waterholes, feed concentrations areas where the wheat has been harvested, or known flyways. Pass shooting is usually unproductive except where heavy concentrations of birds are found. The dove census also fails to take into account the second and third broods of immature doves that were not on the wing when the census was completed. Dove migration patterns are undefined and little actual knowledge is available. It is believed by many that most of the doves bagged are native to the state.

In 1956 the nation's dove kill was estimated at 19,000,000. Nearly 300,000 were bagged in Missouri. Ammunition manufacturers say that more shells are expended on doves than on any other species of game except rabbits. Doves inhabit all of the 48 states but some 15 states classify them as songbirds and do not permit an open season. It is only in recent years that they have gained wide popularity as a sport target.

There is little to be gained by making an all-day affair of a dove hunt. They are active only in the early morning hours and late afternoons. During the middle they perch in some leafy grove and take wing only when disturbed. They require quantities of water and often are seen around favored drinking holes. They also need gravel to digest their food, which is mostly hard grain.

September is usually warm in the Mid-West and Missouri is no exception. Most of the hunters will be in shirt-sleeve attire. A dark-colored shirt and trousers are preferred. The birds soon become wary and any unfamiliar object will cause them to flare and go in to high gear. They are capable of speeds up to 40 miles an hour when they become alarmed. They also can cruised along at slow speeds when they are undisturbed.

Most hunters prefer some sort of blind although it does not have to be as elaborate as those used by waterfowlers. A tree with low hanging branches or even a shock of corn or a convenient haystack will serve the purpose. Doves can rapidly change their flight pattern and the limit of 10 from a box of shells is considered good shooting. Their feather armor is much more shot-resistant than that of the bobwhite, and 6s and 8s are the preferred shot size. The power load should be in excess of that normally used on quail.

The dove bag last year was about 310,000 birds. Years ago they were perhaps as plentiful but dove hunting was not a popular sport. The scarcity of quail throughout the drought years converted many hunters to these feathered speedsters. They can veer as sharply as any bird that flies and when they are riding a tail wind they are capable of evasive aerial maneuvers.

Leading the bird is all-important in successful dove shooting. Following through, with the gun ahead of the target also is necessary to score as many hits as misses. The lead, of course, depends on the distance of the shooter from the target and his ability to correctly estimate the speed of flight. Doves are tricky targets and worthy of the fire of the best marksmen.

Bow and arrow enthusiasts are taking rough fish, deer, rabbits and other game with their age-old equipment. The growth of archery hunting has been phenomenal in the last few years. They are of the sporting fraternity that would frown on shooting a sitting bird. The Conservation Commission has decreed that doves are legal game for bows and arrows. But, it is doubtful that many doves will fall to the speeding arrow. The odds are long on the shotgun side.

Red Villas Oust Champion Mallorys From Amateur Meet

C.S.M.C. Defeats Kutis, 5-1

Excellent pitching has put the Red Villas and Carondelet Sunday Morning Club in the final round of the Metropolitan tournament of the American Amateur Baseball Congress.

They will meet for the title Friday at 8 p.m. at Champ Park, Airport and Brown roads, with the winner to advance to a regional meet at Cushing, Okla.

Bob Mallory scattered seven hits to give the Villas a 5-1 victory over the defending champion Mallorys. Carondelet downed Kutis North, 5-1, behind the four-hit pitching of Mel O'Bannon.

Mallory, who had two doubles and a single, ruined his chances for a shutout when he threw wild on an attempted pickoff play with two out.

The Villas scored twice in the fourth off Don Miller. Roy Rollings walked, Gerry Prego singled and Charley Meine tripled. They tallied four more in the fifth. After Mallory doubled and Jerry Moore tripled, Bill Scerba replaced Miller. Tom Brady tripled and Rollings singled.

Carondelet Manager Irv Liberton homered and made a brilliant catch of a drive to left field by Ed Gerken. John Maltagliati also hit a home run for Carondelet. Manager Al Mick and Coach Frank DeFrank argued that the ball went foul and were ejected. Lee Engert of Kutis also was ousted in the ninth.

C.Y.C. Baseball

St. Pius will play St. Joseph in a C.Y.C. senior division baseball playoff game tonight, with the loser to be eliminated. The match will be on Fairground Park Diamond No. 1 at 6 o'clock. St. Engelbert (1-0) will oppose Epiphany (0-0) at 8:30.

St. Agatha will meet the winner of the St. Engelbert-Epiphany game Sunday. The loser tonight will take on the St. Joseph-St. Pius survivor in Sunday's other contest.

RAIL STOCK GROUP IS FINAL TRADE LEADER

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (UPI)—Stocks rose through most of today's session on increased volume and slipped back in late trading. Baltimore, Md., an outstanding exception, moved up swiftly when the railroad reported net income of approximately $2,931,000 for July, the largest profit shown for any month this year and compared with $1,818,000 in July, 1957. Other railroad issues ruled firm with gains running to more than a point in Chesapeake & Ohio.

Some of the drug, steel, chemical, oil, motor and special issues registered losses late in the day after having been higher most of the session. Several specials however, managed to hold in the face of the late out of advances that ranged to more than three points.

The market had in its favor a strengthened technical position, an indication of better than expected business gains in the second quarter, a record high for electricity output, and several favorable dividend actions.

Dividend increases helped Safeway stores and Food Fair stores.

Blocks of 10,000 to 20,000 shares appeared in Potomac Electric, Republic Pictures, Denver & Rio Grande, and Louisville Gas & Electric.

The Associated Press reported that of 113 issues traded, 511 rose and 377 fell. There were 54 new highs for the year and eight new lows.

Volume was 2,480,000 shares, compared with 2,250,000 yesterday.

The Associated Press average of 80 stocks rose 70 cents to $183.30 with the industrials up 50 cents, the rails up $1.80 and the utilities up 10 cents.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock average was 22.02, a point higher at 47.32 at the close. The 425 industrials rose .01 to 60.50 and the 25 rails rose 1.50 points to 131.18 and the 15 utilities were unchanged at 78.12.

NEXT KIRKSVILLE GAS HEARING TO BE OCT. 9

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 20 (AP) — The next round in a fight over natural gas for the Kirksville area comes up before the State Public Service Commission Oct. 9.

That was the date the commission set after Central Missouri Gas Co. completed its testimony late Monday. The company seeks to hook onto the Michigan-Wisconsin Pipe Line Co. system in order to serve Kirksville, Lancaster, Queen City and Greenup. The project is expected to cost more than $2,000,000.

Civic leaders testified yesterday that residents of the area want and need natural gas to attract new industry and keep growing.

Mayor T. A. Eichorn said voters approved a franchise for Central Missouri Gas Co. last month by a 9-1 vote.

He said some new industries have walked out when they learned the city did not have natural gas. Some of the downtown area is served now with steam heat by Missouri Power and Light Co., and bottled propane fuel is supplied.

Missouri Midland Gas Co., which sells the bottled gas, is opposing the application. Its side of the case will be heard when the hearing resumes Oct. 9.

CAR REPOSSESSOR ALMOST LOSES LIFE—NO BRAKES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP) — James Ingram, a finance company man, repossessed a car yesterday and nearly lost his life doing it.

Ingram poured in some brake fluid after the ex-owner warned him the brakes were faulty. Then, Ingram told police, he tried the brakes on the first steep incline he encountered. The brakes did not work, and neither did the horn.

The car sped through five intersections, went onto the sidewalk five times, narrowly missed a bus and a cab. Ingram hung on to the wheel, yelling at people to get out of the way. He tried the emergency brake. Then he tried reverse gear, first gear, second gear and third, stripping them all.

The car finally smashed through a barricade around an open manhole, knocked down a fire hydrant and crashed against a police precinct station. The car was a total wreck. Damage to the station was estimated at $750. Ingram was treated for shoulder lacerations and a bitten tongue, then charged with operating a vehicle with defective brakes.

DIRECTORS OF KATY LINE VOTE TO AMEND STOCK PLAN

The board of directors of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Lines, at a special meeting yesterday, voted to amend the preferred stock plan in accordance with a decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Under the commission's ruling, the company would issue a $100 5½ per cent debenture, a non-interest-bearing $110 certificate against earnings and one share of common stock for each share of preferred stock. The plan would take care of the $166 arrearage in dividends on each of the 667,000 shares of preferred.

The modified plan will be submitted to the preferred stockholders for approval, and requests for assents will be mailed to them during the first week of September.

AUSTRALIAN PARLIAMENT ELECTION SET FOR NOV. 22

CANBERRA, Aug. 20 (AP) — Prime Minister Menzies announced today that Australia will elect a new parliament Nov. 22.

The present House of Representatives, elected for three years on Dec. 10, 1955, and the half of the Senate elected for six years on May 9, 1953, will be dissolved Oct. 14, Menzies said.

Menzies's Liberal party has 57 seats in the present house and governs in a coalition with the 18-seat Country party. The opposition Labor party holds the other 49 seats. In the Senate, the Liberals have 24 members, the Country party 6, and Labor 30.

HERMAN KIERDORF HELD UNDER $25,000 BOND

PONTIAC, Mich., Aug. 20 (AP) — Herman Kierdorf, described as the key figure in the mysterious torch death of his nephew, Frank, was held today under bond of $25,000 to await examination on a charge of possessing a pistol silencer. Frank was a former Teamster business agent and a former convict.

The 68-year-old Kierdorf was unable to raise bail immediately.

Authorities have admitted they are at an apparent dead end in their investigation of Frank Kierdorf's death.

Police say that Frank, contrary to his deathbed statement, was burned in an arson job at a Flint (Mich.) dry cleaning shop. Frank said two strangers burned him in a deliberate plot. Herman, who disappeared shortly before Frank died, surrendered voluntarily Sunday night.

ELECTRONIC EAR HEARS COMMANDS FOR COMPUTERS

DAYTON, O., Aug. 20 (UPI) — Electronic "brains" still cannot talk, but at least now they can listen, the Air Force disclosed today.

Technicians at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base say they have devised a mechanical ear that can convert 30 English words directly into electronic codes for instructions to computers.

And the machine—Air Materiel Command automatic compiler, or AIMCO — will eventually be taught a larger human listening vocabulary.

Designed by the Remington Rand division of Sperry Rand Corp., and the Air Materiel Command here, AIMCO eliminates manual translation of the spoken word to machine language. It uses a giant computer to make the conversion electronically, for itself and for such other "brains" as Remington Rand's Univac.

"This is a tremendous forward step in the data processing field," says Gen. E. W. Rawlings, commander of the Air Materiel Command.

"It means improvement in two difficult areas: explicit definition and understanding between management and computer programmers, and relief from the expensive drudgery of writing machine programs."

Officer of Big Bend Bank.

PORTAGEVILLE POSTMASTER TO QUIT; BUYS DRUG STORE

He has been postmaster for about five years. Before his appointment he was associated with his brother in the business. About 20 years ago the brothers operated a drug store in Steele.

J. H. Workman will retire from active business and his brother will give full time to the store.

Meanwhile, vital legislation remained blocked in his Rules Committee. According to congressional red tape, there could be no action during his absence.

This was not the first time Smith has placed three barns of cows ahead of several million people.

Last year when the Rules Committee wanted to act on the civil rights bill, Smith again would not come back to Washington. This time it was reported that one of his barns had burned down.

"I knew Howard Smith would do anything to block a civil rights bill," cracked Speaker Sam Rayburn, "but I never suspected he would resort to arson."

Smith's Real Concern.

Smith's concern for cows is understandable, but those who have watched this Congressman sometimes wonder why his concern reaches a climax at crucial moments when legislation concerning people is at stake. They find on close examination that Smith's real concern is not so much cows as the private utilities.

His favorite utility is the Potomac Electric Power Co., which operates in and around Washington. From Pepco, Smith's affections spread out to other power companies. The record also shows that real estate interests rate ahead of cows in the Congressman's affection.

For instance, when the Congressman was finally induced by Speaker Rayburn to come back to Washington last week, Smith promptly arranged a deal. He agreed privately to let some of the deadlocked legislation get out of his Rules committee if the TVA financing bill were killed.

This is what Smith's utility friends were fighting for. Nine electric power presidents turned up in Washington to battle against letting the TVA borrow money to expand its power plants in the south. They were determined to bottle up the Tennessee Valley Authority, and their friend from Virginia obliged. He was willing to compromise on other matters, provided the TVA financing bill was killed.

Compromises on Housing.

He was even willing to compromise a bit on housing. As chairman of the Rules Committee, he could kill the housing bill. The real estate lobby had already passed the big billion dollar bonanza by which the Federal Government guarantees private housing loans under FHA. Having got this passed, the lobby has been quietly trying to block the housing bill for slum clearance, urban renewal, college housing, and nursing homes.

So, when Smith condescended to come back to Washington from attending his cows, he agreed in backstage huddles to release his throttle-hold on the housing bill provided it was drastically re-written. Most of the meat was then taken out of the public housing bill.

Thus operates the courteous, courtly, doleful-faced Congressman, who still lives in George Washington's old district even though officially he had to move to a more rural district to keep on being re-elected. Alexandria, Va., became too progressive.

The Federal Government puts up so much money for them, and their state puts up so much. What they get varies from state to state. The variation depends on how much the state puts up.

The maximum government payment — towards the total Government-state payment for people in this group — was $80 a month. It now goes up to $85 and takes effect Oct. 1.

In the case of needy children — usually meaning children whose fathers have deserted them or died and whose mothers are needed at home to care for them — the maximum payment was $32. This now goes down to $30 a month. It will mean smaller payments for them in states which do not make up for this federal reduction.

African Seminar.

As part of the program of area training, the Ford Foundation has financed a 60-day traveling seminar through Africa south of the Sahara for 21 foreign service officers who have just completed a year of university study or are about to begin one.

Headed by Fred L. Hadsel, first secretary of the United States Embassy in London, the group started off on June 20 at the University College of Ghana, where British and local officials and scholars gathered to give the Americans a briefing on West Africa. From there the group visited Kenya and Northern Rhodesia and spent two days at the Rhodes Livingstone Institute for Social Research at Lusaka.

They studied Central Africa at the University College of Salisbury in Southern Rhodesia. Other points visited were South Africa, Belgian Congo, Portuguese East Africa, Nigeria and French West Africa.

West Germany

last winter, Bonn has begun to respond to these appeals.

In the last few days West Germany has joined with the United States and Britain in a joint effort to rescue India from her worsening exchange difficulties. Premier Karamanlis of Greece will arrive in Bonn Sept. 8 to talk about the West German pledge, given two weeks ago, to assist industrial development in Greece.

Parallel pressure from within the West German economy has also acted as a prod on cautious government authorities. In the first six months of 1958 West Germany's chronic trade surplus was greater by $170,000,000 than in the same period of 1957, rising to a total of $620,000,000.

The widening of the gap took place despite a 5 per cent increase in imports in terms of volume. Due to the fall in world commodity prices, imports by value declined 2 per cent to $3,580,000,000 in a half year. At the same time West German exports increased by 2 per cent to a record high of $4,200,000,000.

In the judgment of independent economists, the trade figures indicate that West Germany soon will be faced with alternative courses in commercial policy: to start exporting capital on the order of about $1,000,000,000 per year or brace for a cutback in the export trade on which her domestic prosperity depends heavily.

POLITICAL AIMS BEHIND PEIPING MILITARY MOVES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—United States officials said yesterday Red China is seeking to create new Far East military tensions to bolster its claim to a seat at any big power-East-West conference.

This is the considered view of authorities who have been carefully watching the build-up of Chinese Communist air-power opposite the Nationalist-held islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

An estimated 250 Soviet-built MIG jet planes have been moved into five previously unoccupied airfields near Fukien. This has aroused fears among Nationalist leaders on Formosa that it may be a prelude to an attack against the offshore islands and perhaps even Formosa.

American intelligence officials do not share this alarm, however. They believe it more likely that the Peiping military moves, accompanied by tougher anti-Western propaganda, are aimed at political rather than military objectives.

Peiping leaders are deliberately whipping up a war scare, these officials said, hoping this would get party chief Mao Tse-tung an invitation to any high-level meeting. Some nations might favor this, it is believed, on the theory that Mao might be persuaded at any such parley to call off any war preparations.

U.S. Jets to Formosa. To reassure Nationalist China, however, this country is flying to Formosa a group of F100 Super Saber jets as a symbol of United States pledges to help Chiang Kai-shek's forces beat back any Chinese Communist attack against his island refuge. They also reinforce an American pledge to help defend the offshore islands if President Eisenhower should decide such an attack is directed at Formosa itself.

Most intelligence authorities who discount the likelihood of any Chinese Communist attack base this on a continuing belief Russia does not want to risk a major war with the United States in the Far East.

In this view, Moscow approval would be necessary before Red China launched such an assault. Russia, they said, would have the main burden of supplying Chinese Communist forces with weapons and equipment, including high quality jet fuel which is critically scarce on the China mainland.

Skeptical of Arms Aid. Most officials here are highly skeptical of rumors that Russia has promised to provide atomic weapons and missiles to the Chinese Reds. These authorities did not rule out, however, the prospect that the Soviets might send atomic bombs and missiles but in the continuous custody of Soviet experts who pull the trigger if and when a decision was made to use them.

Meanwhile Peiping radio said that "American imperialists have posed a new military threat against Asian nations" by sending 2000 Marines to Singapore.

"This new military movement clearly shows the United States does not intend to ease international tension, but wants to step it up," the Red Chinese radio said.

The Navy in Washington announced the arrival of Marines and ships in Singapore Sunday as preparation for helping any nation in the Indian ocean area that might be affected by the Mideast crisis.

HEIKKILA ORDERED TO FACE HEARING ON DEPORTATION
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20 (AP)—William Heikkila, whose sudden deportation to Finland caused a brief international furor last April, was ordered yesterday to face a formal deportation hearing.

The Immigration Service returned the 53-year-old former Communist to San Francisco a few days after he was seized on the streets and flown out of the country. Defense Attorney Lloyd E. McMurray said he would talk steps in court to block the newly ordered special inquiry. He noted a federal restraining order forbids deportation of Heikkila while an appeal is pending in court.

Heikkila has appealed from a decision that he was legally deported to Finland last April 18. The Government has been trying for 10 years to deport the draftsman who was brought to the United States as an infant but never naturalized.

JUSTICE DOUGLAS BEGINS HIKE TO SAVE WILDERNESS

PORT ANGELES, Wash., Aug. 20 (AP)—Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and a party of about 70 started yesterday on a three-day hike to a highway along a primitive ocean front section of Olympic National Park.

The justice entertained fellow hikers Monday night at his cabin near Mora, Wash. The hikers are carrying their own packs and cooking meals.

Douglas called the group "friends of the wilderness," and said "the wilderness needs friends."

TWO ROBBERS STEAL $125 AT FINANCE COMPANY

Ora Lerose, a clerk at the Empire Finance Co., 3886 Easton avenue, was held up yesterday by two men who fled with $125 from an open safe and an undetermined amount from a cash box, police reported.

Lerose said the two robbers, one armed with a revolver, made him lie on the floor while they took the money and fled, apparently on foot.

MATTOON YOUTH SUBDUED AFTER THREAT TO POLICE

MATTOON, Ill., Aug. 20 (AP)—A youth who threatened an officer with a rifle and then hid in an attic was found unconscious Monday after a police tear gas barrage.

Charles W. Wittenberg, 19 years old, a diabetic and a former mental patient, was taken to Memorial Hospital.

Deputy sheriff Paul Smith said he called for help when Wittenberg brandished a .22 caliber rifle and ordered him away from the house. Smith said he was at the home to question Wittenberg about a rock-throwing incident.

Except for tear gas pellets, no shots were fired. Wittenberg had a rifle, a pistol and a sack of ammunition when police found him. His mother, Mrs. Guineith Wittenberg, 54, remained outside during the siege.

Police said Wittenberg will be charged with throwing a rock that smashed through a window in the home of State's Attorney Ralph Glenn Sunday night.

BURNS CAUSED 18 DEATHS IN NANTUCKET AIR CRASH

NANTUCKET, Mass., Aug. 20 (UPI)—Eighteen of the 23 persons who were killed in the crash of a Northeast Airlines plane here last Saturday died of burns, a medical examiner's report showed today.

The twin-engine Convair plane burst into flames when it crashed in a wooded area short of the runway in a dense fog.

Five of the victims, including the pilot, John T. Burnham, and the co-pilot, David C. Carey, died of fractured skulls, Dr. Ernest H. Menges reported.

Meanwhile, Civil Aeronautics

Board investigators continued their investigation in an effort to determine the exact cause of the crash.

SCOUT MUSEUM WILL BE BUILT AS MEMORIAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J., Aug. 20—Plans for construction of a Boy Scout Historical Museum here as a memorial to the late Mrs. Gale F. Johnston, wife of the St. Louis banker and civic leader, were announced yesterday.

Construction of the one-story brick building is expected to begin this fall with dedication in 1960, the fiftieth anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America. Uniforms, photographs and other mementoes of the Scout movement will be displayed in the museum.

Johnston, a vice president of the Boy Scouts of America since 1951 and former president of the St. Louis Council, donated funds for construction of the museum as a memorial to his wife, Mrs. Miriam Rand Johnston, who died in 1956.

BRITAIN, U.A.R. SUSPEND TALKS ON COMPENSATION

CAIRO, Aug. 20 (UPI)—The British-United Arab Republic talks in Geneva on compensation for the British-French invasion of Suez in 1956 have been suspended, an official source reported last night.

He said the negotiations were broken off because although Britain "recognized" Egypt's right to compensation, it refused to meet the U.A.R.'s claim for damages.

The announcement came a short time after the United Arab Republic signed an agreement with France settling their financial difficulties. The agreement was reported to have paved the way for early resumption of diplomatic relations by the two nations.

DOROTHY THOMPSON RETIRES

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (AP)—Dorothy Thompson announced her retirement as a newspaper columnist yesterday after 22 years, to write an autobiography.

She said the death of her third husband, Maxim Kopf, last July 7 led her in part to make the break.

Miss Thompson, now 64 years old, previously was married to Josef Bard and Sinclair Lewis. She plans to continue her monthly essay published in the Ladies' Home Journal.

RUSSIA PLANS 2 NEW ANTARCTIC BASES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20—The Soviet Union has notified the other nations with expedition in Antarctica that it plans to establish two new bases there and carry out transcontinental explorations.

The projected bases are to be in Queen Maud Land, claimed by Norway, and on the coast of the Bellingshausen sea. This coast is bisected by the boundary between a Chilean claim and what is sometimes called the American sector, although it is not officially claimed by the United States.

In October, Soviet tractors at Station Vostok, at the Geomagnetic Pole, are to head for the South Pole itself. From there they plan to drive across the lofty polar plateau to the Pole of Inaccessibility.

The latter is the point most distant from the sea and is about 14,000 feet above sea level.

Soviet tractors bogged down during the last Antarctic summer in their effort to drag supplies to that point for station Sovetskaya. The station has been temporarily placed several hundred miles short of there.

The Russians hope to move Sovetskaya to the Pole of Inaccessibility in October and November—the Antarctic spring.

Meanwhile, the United States plans to transfer the operation of its most outlying stations to other nations. Wilkes Station will be turned over to Australia, and Ellsworth Station, on the Weddell Sea, to Argentina. One or two American scientists may work at one or both of these camps.

PROVIDENCE, R. I. Aug. 20 (AP)—Rose Gadbois, 64 years old, a stenographer who has been blind since infancy, completed 40 years with B-I-F Industries this week. Despite the handicap she has won national citations for dictation and typing on technical subjects, using Braille shorthand and dictating machines.

Secretary's Reward

MISS BERTHA ADKINS, former assistant chairman of the Republican National Committee, about to be kissed by LEONARD HALL, former G.O.P. chairman, after she was sworn in yesterday as Under Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. The crowd on hand to witness the ceremony in Washington was so large that the event had to be held in an auditorium.

CONVICTED RUSSIAN SPY
ESCAPES SWEDISH PRISON

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 20 (AP)—A Turkish-Armenian engineer serving 10 years for spying for Russia escaped yesterday from Stockholm's Langholmen prison.

Police believed the 33-year-old man, Bedros Zartaryan, hid in one of several hampers of dirty laundry which were taken out of the prison. He was only 5 feet 6 inches tall. A country-wide alarm was sent out. Zartaryan was convicted in March 1937 of furnishing the Soviet Union with information on Swedish atom-proof underground military establishments. He failed in an escape attempt last September.

NEW VIOLENCE NIKE LAUNCHING
IN BEIRUT; 2 SHOT, STATION WILL BE BOMB EXPLODED BUILT AT SEDALIA

BEIRUT, Aug. 20 (AP)—A man with a sub-machine gun mowed down two men in a hotel and a terrorist bombed the central post office in a new outbreak of violence today.

One of the two men shot down in the hotel barbershop was killed. The shooting occurred a block from the seafront where United States service men were boarding buses after a day's liberty in Lebanon's capital. No Americans were involved in the shooting.

Earlier in the day, a terrorist boldly walked through police lines, past a pair of tanks, and planted a bomb in the central post office.

The explosion injured three persons.

COMPLIANCE WITH COURT
RULINGS URGED BY ROGERS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—Attorney General William P. Rogers said yesterday that American freedoms depend on compliance with court decisions.

"It is not enough just to rest on moral principles," he said at an interfaith luncheon. He did not refer specifically to federal circuit court ruling in St. Louis Monday that Little Rock, Ark., schools must continue integration this fall. He said the nation's "great independent judiciary accounts in large measure for the freedom and religious liberty that we enjoy today."

Rogers received a citation for promoting better group relations.

Last Laugh.
BALTIMORE (AP)—A man with connections asked two other patrons why they were wearing hats inside a West Baltimore bar—were they federal agents? Yes, the men replied as a joke. They stopped laughing when the man telephoned Washington and 20 minutes later a platoon of real agents moved in and asked some very serious questions.

SEDALIA, Mo., Aug. 20 (AP)—The Army announced Monday a Nike missile installation will be built near Sedalia. The Nike is a weapon designed to knock enemy bombers out of the sky.

Selection of the site will begin within the next two weeks. The Army said that when the installation is completed the Nike Hercules missile will be standard equipment. The missile has an atomic as well as conventional warhead capability.

The Army emphasized there would be no firing tests and the only time missiles would be fired would be in the event of a hostile air attack.

Officials of the Fifth United States Army said the troops that will man the installation will be especially trained personnel. Normally, each Nike battery has a complement of about 100 officers and men.

11,000 STRANDED IN TOKYO
SUBWAY BY SHORT CIRCUIT

TOKYO, Aug. 20 (AP)—A dragging piece of metal short-circuited Tokyo's main subway today, stalling 14 trains carrying an estimated 11,000 rush-hour passengers.

Angry and panicky passengers broke windows on four of the trains stopped in the hot, dark tunnel between stations. The automatic train doors were opened and some 4000 persons were led along the tracks to exits. Eight persons became ill from the heat. No injuries were reported in the 1½-hour tieup.

GENETICS CONGRESS OPENS,
RUSSIANS CANCEL TALKS

MONTREAL, Aug. 20 (AP)—The tenth International Congress of Genetics opened here today after the last-minute cancellation of a number of talks by Russian experts on plant and animal heredity.

The American chairman of the program committee, Dr. E. W. Casper, said all the canceled talks seemed to have disagreed in some manner with the theories of Soviet Prof. Trofim D. Lysenko.

Lysenko was a favorite of Stalin who laid down the law in genetics under the Soviet dictator. He contends that characteristics acquired because of environment can be passed on through inheritance, a theory generally discredited in the West and disputed by some Soviet scientists. For several years after Stalin died in 1953 Lysenko was in disgrace, but last year some of his ideas appeared to be finding favor with Soviet boss Nikita Khrushchev.

CLOUDBURSTS, LANDSLIDES
HIT NORTH ITALY VILLAGES

ROME, Aug. 20 (UPI)—Cloudbursts brought death and destruction to several Alpine villages in northern Italy today and isolated Aosta, a town of 24,000.

One person was drowned and 11 others, including four unidentified foreign tourists, were missing in the Domodossola area near the Swiss border.

The Diveria river, swollen by heavy rains, overflowed when a landslide blocked its course at San Giovanni, five miles from Domodossola. Slides and floods cut rail and road communications with Aosta, 50 miles west of Domodossola.

Pilgrimage in Poland

Turrets of an ancient monastery rise high above throng of pilgrims who attended the Feast of the Atonement at the Jasna Gora monastery at Czestochowa, Poland, last Friday. The pilgrimage, in which about 100,000 Roman Catholics took part, was part of a 12-week crusade of prayer following recent Communist attacks on the church. The monastery was raided July 21 by Communist police who charged it was used as a cover for illegal anti-Communist publication activities.

Orphans in a Small World

Knowledge that the world is small and full of quirks brings smiles to Marguerite Enciso (left) and Mary Warnecke, former orphans from Yokohama, Japan. Reared together at an orphanage, they were adopted by different American families at different times. Reunion and the discovery they live only a mile apart at Glendale, Calif., came when Mary, 8 years old, recognized Marguerite, 10, in a newspaper picture.

Art Buchwald Man Who Wanted To Be Alone

THE SWISS MOUNTAINS were getting us down and so we put in for a transfer to Monte Carlo.

"Why don't you go alone?" our wife said.

"It wouldn't be any fun alone," we said, flushing with excitement. "But then again it hardly seems fair to drag you and the children away from this paradise."

"You need the rest," she insisted. "Besides, you didn't bring a raincoat here and we did."

"Well, as long as you put it that way, I'll just make a fast trip down there to take a swim and I'll be back before the snow melts on the Matterhorn."

"All right," she said, accepting a pair of pearl earrings as a gift. "But promise me you won't talk to any single women."

"I won't even talk to married women," we promised. "You don't have to worry about me."

Before she could change her mind we were on a plane to Paris and then on the Blue Train to Monaco.

THE BLUE TRAIN arrives in Cannes at 8 o'clock, in Nice at 8:30 and in Monte Carlo at 9:30. The train was full when we left Paris but by the time we arrived in Nice there were only two of us left in the car. Besides ourselves there was an attractive woman who seemed to be traveling alone. As the train pulled out of Nice both of us were standing in the aisle looking out the window.

She smiled at us, but we didn't smile back. "Everybody got off the train," she said.

We didn't reply. "It's so lonely."

We turned the other way.

"Are you going to Monte Carlo?"

We nodded "yes."

"So am I."

We smiled.

"Traveling can get to be so lonely. Have you ever had the feeling you want to talk to somebody in the worst way?"

"Once in a while," we said, breaking the silence. "But not very often."

"I love to talk to people, but very few people talk to me."

We didn't say anything.

"I have a wonderful story to tell someone."

We pretended we were trying to close the window.

"It's filled with sadness and loneliness," she continued. "But no one will listen to it."

We got the window closed.

"Would you believe it, you're the first stranger I've wanted to talk to in 30 years?"

We opened the window.

"I guess I've always been frightened of people."

THE TRAIN WENT into a tunnel. When we came out she said, "You have a sympathetic face. Would you listen to my story?"

We shook our head.

The silence was embarrassing.

"Wouldn't you even listen to part of it? One small anecdote?"

We shook our head again.

"That's the trouble," she sighed. "When I finally meet someone I want to talk to, he doesn't want to listen."

We wanted to explain to her the promise we made to our wife, but instead we said, "I want to be alone," and went back into our own compartment to read the newspaper.

When we arrived in Monte Carlo there was only one porter and we had to share him with the woman. As we got to the gate we saw a friend of ours, George Schlee, run up to the woman and kiss her.

Then he shook hands with us and said, "I see you've met Greta."

"Greta who?" we said turning to the woman.

"Greta Garbo."

We threw ourselves in front of the next train going back to Paris.

Weather Worry

A NUMBER OF WEEKS AGO I wrote that too much stress is being put on weather reports via radio and television. Some stations issue hourly bulletins. I did not mention the possible value of these reports for farmers. Here is a letter about that:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Whoa there! Back up! In your column about weather you are hand-in-hand with weather reporters in that you completely forgot the farmer. Unless you are a farmer you can't possibly understand how grating it is to have weather thought of as the monopoly of the city folks. Many of the Friday during weeks of drought when we've turned on the radio and heard a cheerful voice announcing "good news tonight, friends—we're in for a nice, sunny weekend."

At any rate, we farmers still do exist, and like farmers of bygone days, are at the mercy of the weather. Those weather reports, particularly the five-day ones, are a god-send to the farmer. Along with you, I can't see where weather should be of such vital interest to a largely urban population. But surely we who are charged with feeding the population have a right to be weather-conscious.

Comment: I'll go along with your need for weather reports. However, I wish there might be a way of sending the information to you farmers in code. That might spare us urban folk the repetitions din and clatter of weather reports on radio and television.

Variety Marks New Suits for Fall

By Sylvia Stiles

ST. LOUIS WOMEN who are planning late summer trips to cooler climates or who like to invest in fall clothes early will be interested in the many new suits at moderate prices that are arriving in the St. Louis stores.

There is variety in the styles and the colors. Many of the suits have the longer jackets of the stroller type. Others feature the bloused silhouette. Colors include new shades of green, bright blue, russet browns and the ever popular shades of gray. As for the fabric, this seems to be the buyer's choice. Tweeds are plentiful as are the lightweight wool flannels. Broadcloth is being revived and wool jersey continues a favorite. Some of the suits have detachable fur collars. Illustrated are examples of the fashions available.

1—The vogue of bow trimming is seen on the jacket of this slim suit which features modified chemise lines. There is a hipband that fits tight to the figure on this loose-fitting jacket, and the bows are attached to either side of the band. Shoulders are rounded, the sleeves being cut in the same piece with the front and back of the jacket. Wider, rounded collar is characteristic of the new fashions. The back of the jacket has an inverted pleat which gives a bloused effect. Skirt has a pleat at the back of the hemline. Fabric is a very lightweight green flannel. A shade of cinnamon brown also is available. Suit is in junior size.

2—Versions of the trapeze suit are important, especially in the youthful models. This suit follows the trapeze lines with its loose jacket swinging from a yoke and its four-gored, flaring skirt. The back of the jacket yoke extends downward to form a panel which is buttoned just below the waistline. Big buttons trim the front of the jacket.

Suit fabric is a light weight broadcloth which may be obtained in red, brown or green. Detachable collar is of mink.

3—The back of this suit is its most striking feature. A deep fold of the fabric forms a box-pleated effect over each shoulder. This is triangular in line, being wide at the top and sloping inward at the low waistline. Buttons are placed as trimming on each fold. Jacket is slightly indented at the waistline and extends below the natural waistline for a jaunty effect. Sleeves are long and fitted. A leopard collar that is detachable is placed over one of the suit fabric. Skirt is slim and straight.

4—The walking suit is il-

Illustrated by this flattering style which is available in a flecked tweed with bright blue or copper tone predominating. There are triangular box pleats at the back of the shoulders for soft draped fullness. The wide collar rolls

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn

ALBERT J. GOETZ of Lawrence, L.I., picked up a top-on-the-board with today's duplicate hand because he decided not to open the bidding with the South cards. The hand was played at the Windsor Bridge Club, which is directed by Mrs. Goetz, and at all the other tables South opened with one spade, reached a part score at spades and took eight or nine tricks.

When Goetz sat South, he passed and after West opened the bidding with one spade, he got the contract at two no-trump. He made his contract with an overtrick for 120 points and top score.

West opened the king of spades against the two no-trump contract and declarer won with the ace and sent back a low spade. West going in with the ten and shifting to a low diamond, won with the king in South. Declarer next led a club for the successful finesse of the queen and followed with the nine of spades, overtaking with the jack and losing to the queen.

West again shifted to a diamond and declarer tried dummy's jack, covered by the queen and ace. Now declarer cashed the seven and four of spades and led a heart from his hand. West covered with the queen and dummy's ace won. Declarer continued the jack of hearts and West won with the king.

Having no diamonds left, West had to put declarer on the board with the ace of clubs and dummy's heart ten was the overtrick. South lost two spades, a heart and finally a club to East at the end of three-odd.

When South was declarer at three spades at one of the other tables, West opened the king of hearts, which was permitted to hold the trick. West switched to a diamond and declarer won with the king, successfully finessed the queen of clubs, cashed the ace of clubs and ruffed a club in the closed hand.

Next declarer finessed the jack of hearts, cashed the heart ace, played the ace of diamonds and gave up his losing diamond to East. East returned his last club. South ruffed in with the seven of spades and West over-ruffed with the spade ten.

Now West, holding the king-queen-six of spades, was end-played. He led the low spade and declarer took the jack, laid down the spade ace to drop the queen and conceded the last trick to the trump king. He made his three-spade contract, losing a heart, a diamond, a club overruff and finally a trump trick.

How to Clean Aluminum

By Hubbard Cobb

THERE is a good deal of aluminum going into homes today and much of it is exposed to the weather and the elements.

Now while aluminum is a non-corrosive metal, some of it will become discolored when exposed to air that contains industrial fumes or too much salt. And, of course, if there is dirt in the air, the aluminum is going to get soiled.

It's often possible to clean aluminum with warm water and soap. This will remove surface dirt but it won't always remove the discoloration. To get rid of the discoloration you need a special aluminum cleaner and these are available at hardware and some grocery stores. Many of them are recommended by manufacturers of aluminum and they not only remove the discoloration but they will also leave a protective coating which helps delay future discoloration.

If you prefer, aluminum can be painted and this is sometimes a wise step if you live in an area where the aluminum is subject to fast discoloration.

The aluminum should be wiped down with a solvent to remove all traces of dirt. The best type of primer to use on aluminum is a zinc dust primer. Do not use a lead base primer on aluminum because the lead and the aluminum don't get along.

Once the zinc dust primer is dry and hard, you can use any sort of paint you wish for a finish coat. The paint is not required to protect the aluminum as much as it is to improve the appearance.

Aluminum comes in several grades and the more costly higher grades usually stand up under salty or corrosive air much better than the cheaper quality materials. If you live near the sea or where the air is corrosive and you plan to install equipment made of aluminum, use the best quality you can afford.

Rosemary will grow well in a flower pot. Use the fresh herb with steak or chicken.

Homemaking Doesn't Have To Be Lonely

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

MRS. O'C. WRITES: "You're just a little bit too enthusiastic about the job of homemaking, Dr. Popenoe. Being a man, you would be. But let me teach you the facts of life. I'd like to see you try being a homemaker for just six months—locked up in a small house with two children, who can't even speak, as your only companions—and with one pile of work after another staring you in the face."

"You'd see the world go by outside your window, but you wouldn't be part of it. You'd think of millions of men and women all around you, having fun and taking part in productive enterprises—and you'd realize that they don't even know you exist."

"I'm not sour on the subject of marriage and I love my children, but, believe me, I'd rather be Robinson Crusoe. At least he had a chance to get around and see and do things."

Now, just a minute, Mrs. O'C. What your daily life needs is a little reorganization.

This matter of loneliness, which you describe, is serious for almost everyone. Even Robinson Crusoe admitted this! Recently, in a certain British factory, automation was introduced, with the result that one man was now doing the work of eight men. All the workers got an increase in pay; but they went on strike, nevertheless, in a demand for what they called "lonely money."

Every homemaker, I'm sure, will understand and sympathize. But it's not easy for homemakers to strike.

Since homemaking is literally a question of national life and death, one of the greatest challenges to society is to find ways of overcoming this accompanying loneliness. A mere man, as you so well state, Mrs. O'C., doesn't know much about these things; but don't take my word for it. Follow the example of some homemakers themselves who were once in the same boat as you are.

"There are four of us in this block," Mrs. P. wrote recently, "who are pooling much of our housework—that is, we do it together. Today, all of us are in my home; tomorrow, we'll be in the second woman's house; the day after tomorrow, we'll work at the third woman's house, and so on. In addition to the regular housecleaning, we even find time for baking, mending, laundering and a lot of other things. We designate our own coffee-break periods and we have a chance to catch up on the latest news. Now, we all actually look forward to housework. None of us would think of going back to doing our work alone anymore."

How does this idea strike you, Mrs. O'C?

Amy Vanderbilt The Direct Seller

HOW DO YOU FEEL about salespeople calling upon you at home or telephoning you to sell you something? The old days of "cold" door-to-door solicitation of the housewife have almost disappeared. Most such salesmen make appointments first—a wise thing to do.

The character of the direct seller is also quite different than it used to be. In a recent survey made by the National Association of Direct Selling Companies in Winona, Minn., it was found that about 28 per cent of the direct sales personnel has some college education, 70 per cent sell only in the area where they live, 71 per cent own their own homes and 93 per cent are regular churchgoers.

Most women I have talked to on this subject are irritated if the salesman attempts to make a sale by enlisting sympathy. The "working-my-way-through-college" angle has been grossly overdone and women are rightly suspicious of it. Women don't like, either, the salesman who gets into the house on a pretext that he isn't there to sell anything.

Many homemakers do like to buy at home from direct salespeople whom they know. They buy some two billion dollars worth of products a year this way—everything from cosmetics and silver to nursery stock, flavoring extracts and brushes.

Among the 23,373 salespersons surveyed, 16 per cent said they never got anything but friendly reaction from prospects. Forty-three per cent said they were welcomed 90 per cent of the time, and 22 per cent reported favorable reaction three-fourths of the time.

In spite of the large volume of sales made in this fashion, direct selling accounts for 2 per cent of retail sales.

Quarter Midget Racers Go, Go, Go! Our Amateur Scientists Pose Problem

It's New Fad in Ferguson, With Youngsters 4 to 12 Driving Tiny Cars Full Speed Ahead—Even Mothers Are Enthusiastic Fans

By John Keasler
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

A FAST-SWEEPING FAD which started, of course, in California—it must be the salt air—has roared across the country and landed locally out in Ferguson, that most peaceful of villages, and turned Sunday afternoons into an abbreviated version of the Indianapolis Speedway. We speak of quarter midget racing, with tiny cars using the same type of gasoline engines used in some power lawn mowers.

Quarter midget racing, and we will clear this up at the outset, is little bitty cars piloted by small boys and going like fury, zoom, zoom—sort of a half-pint's answer to the hot-rod age and drowning out all but faint memory of the days when a 6-or-8-year-old was content to roll a hoop.

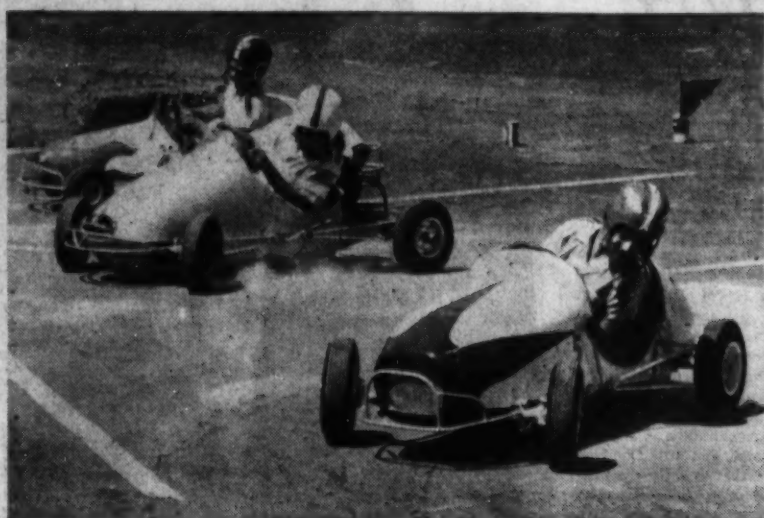

"Go, go, go!" the spectators shout, thronging around the jellybean set's track, and go indeed they do, slamming into one tight turn after another and handling the skids with the aplomb of veteran dirt-trackers.

"Hey!" said a somewhat dated watcher in mild alarm the first time he saw this miniature speedway. "How safe is this?"

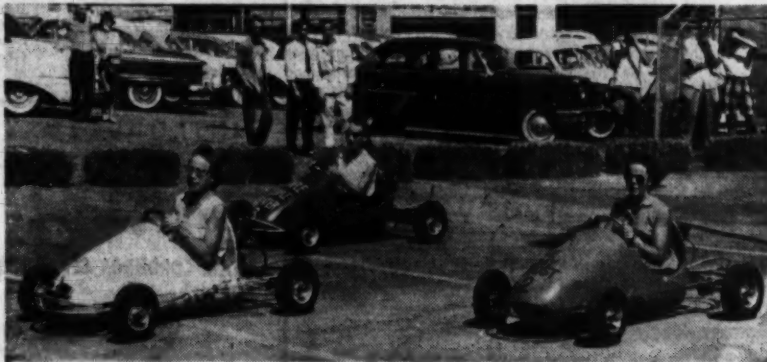

"About as safe as you are walking down the street," said the father of one of the boys. "Considerably safer than you are driving down the street," said another.

This somewhat startling scene takes place on a large asphalt parking lot behind the Savoy Theater in Ferguson's business district where the brand-newly organized Quarter Midget Race Car Club of St. Louis has met the past two Sunday afternoons. Next meeting is Sunday, Aug. 31.

Streamlined, gaily-painted racers with such traditional old names as "Purple People Eater" are driven by youngsters in the 4-to-12 age bracket. These cars are all home-made but many look as professional and modern as day after tomorrow in Detroit.

Skidding into the turn, these three young drivers handle their fast little quarter midget racers like veterans.

Three mothers of young racers try their skill, whipping around the course while the youngsters cheer.

PETE CALECA, wearing plaid cap, facing camera, was originator of new racing club here; has built four quarter midget cars.

Who makes them? Fathers.

It's a father-son hobby of the closest order. Or, for that matter, a father-daughter hobby. A Ferguson resident named Peter A. Caleca, for instance, the man who started the whole thing locally, has no sons but an 8-year-old girl, Frances, fits nicely behind a wheel and loves it.

"I had been reading about all the quarter midget clubs on the West Coast," said Caleca, a McDonnell Aircraft employee, explaining why he started the club. "I thought it looked like fun, and, anyhow, why shouldn't St. Louis have a club like this?"

Some other fathers turned out to be like-minded. The club has 11 racers now, expects a rapid expansion and memberships are welcome—provided qualifications are met.

A quarter midget racer, so called because it is built to one-quarter scale of a standard midget, will cost right around $250, and people get caught up in the hobby—obviously one which produces a lot of enthusiasm—for various reasons.

One father, Thomas Schulte, an auto body repair man, felt the hobby was a natural for him—and his children, Donna, 7, and Tom Jr., 11, were all for the idea. "I want my children to learn to drive right," said Schulte.

At this track a youngster learns to handle horsepower under the best of supervision and with the best of technical help. But it is no nifty-pammy competition. These kids go out to win with every spark of competitive drive they have.

"Come on, come on!" belted a pugnacious-looking youngster driving a car called "The Gray Ghost" and pounding on his mount's flank with one hand, possibly still a trifle confused from a weekend diet of westerns on TV.

At the turn, the track is equipped with buffers, bales of hay stacked side by side. Adult club members try to watch everything at once—keep spectators off the track, racers on and moving.

While these small cars aren't going nearly so fast as they seem to be (the unearthly roaring, skidding and the smallness of the track give an unusually high spectator thrill quotient) they are clocked at up to 30 MPH or so on the straightaway, and "spin-outs" are frequent.

When a racer spins around and stalls in a turn fathers are quick to rush in and move it. And the official flag handler, George Spalding, is a good man to have on hand—he was a professional racing driver for 22 years, has retired to a factory job. "You never get racing out geared direct, have no clutch or transmission. They are started with a push, stopped by cutting the ignition switch and applying a hand brake.

One little lady, evidently on her first solo, furnished the only near mishap of the day. She seemingly forgot all about the switch to stop the car. Wide-eyed and frozen to the wheel she went directly to the straw-bale barrier, right on through it, taking a bale with her and stopping several yards off the track.

"Women drivers!" said one boy.

"Yeah," said his companion, as little girl spectators glared. "That's what my Dad always says."

Steering is direct, hair-trigger sharp, and acceleration is fast. Ground clearance, however, is only two and a half inches, and the driver is almost sitting on the track.

"What was the reaction, generally, of mothers?" we asked Caleca. He pointed to the concession stands, and said: "That's them, running the concessions. They think it is a wonderful idea. This really is a family hobby."

Some of the mothers staged a race themselves, while offspring watched critically. But they did themselves proud, sailing into turns full tilt.

"Look at that!" said Flagman Spalding. "Those gals are driving with twice the confidence they had last week!"

Some of the fathers got in on the act, only slightly hampered by the fact their anatomies prohibited insertion of the bow section into a midget-midget racer. They solved this by sitting only halfway in, one leg and surplus fuselage hung over the side.

The women—who had been besieged with cat-calls of "Clear the track! Look who's coming!"—maintained a demure silence when one father in a race ran over the rear end of the car ahead, and parked on his opponent at about a 45-degree angle.

For more than two hours the spectators and participants alike had themselves a whale of a time.

All that remained, as the crowd struggled toward home, was for parents in the crowd to ad lib their way out of becoming racing car owners for a yearning chorus came from small boys on all sides.

This sport is only four weeks old in the St. Louis area, has only a relatively few members as yet—but one senses the end is not in sight.

Fathers who went down with no more immediate problem than stalling a 6-year-old on the bicycle controversy left the grounds with a considerably more technical problem: how to stall about a racing car.

We have now reached the point where a lot can fully expect Santa to bring him roaring racer for his stocking. The countdown is upon us.

ANOTHER PROBLEM and a pressing one since the excitement about rockets, is confronting parents and teachers. The pupils in science classes learn about explosives, they read in the magazines and papers that come their way what makes a bomb explode and they are on tiptoe to make one or the other. They are taught about gases and the uses to which they are or can be put, and they are eager to try this out too. The result of this has been accidents.

Neither parents nor teachers can watch children every minute of their waking time, and while they are on the alert to prevent any such accidents it is not always going to be possible. Boys can buy the ingredients for a bomb with no trouble at all. All they need is a little money which they can easily get if they do not have it by saying they need it for school lessons in science. (Science is the magic word these days.)

This bulging of the essentials for a bomb experiment is a real problem. What is to be done and who is to be held responsible when a boy buys what he wants for a dangerous experiment and blows his hand off, or does even worse damage to himself? The shopman is in business and his reply is questioned as to why he sold chemicals, pipe, the ingredients of a bomb or other dangerous contraption will be, "If I did not sell them to him somebody else would have and how was I to know what he was going to do with them?"

Something should be done to protect children who are likely to experiment dangerously with such things. But what, and by whom? I do not want another law. Any law that is not the expression of the belief of those it controls has little chance of enforcement. The shopman's conscience must control and just one of them among many will not serve. Maybe they would all declare "no sale" to juniors without authority from parents or teachers? That would place authority where it belongs and responsibility always goes with authority.

Even then there will be accidents but not so many. Children, being children even in early adolescence, will make mistakes and take dangerous risks. Who would expect an intelligent boy to put his head in an airtight bag and tie it securely about his neck? One did; just once. We cannot watch them every minute, nor can we know what thoughts run through their heads.

Travel in Europe For St. Louisans

By Mimi Norcross

WHEN THE NIEUW AMSTERDAM docks in Southampton today several St. Louisans will disembark, among them Miss Almira Baldwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Baldwin, 34 Westmoreland place, and Miss Carol Clarkson. Both girls had been at summer resorts with their families, Miss Baldwin at Wequeton, Mich., where her parents have a summer home, and Miss Clarkson at the recently completed cottage of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Turner Clarkson, 10 Greenbriar, Ladue, in Wianno, on Cape Cod, Mass.

The Nieuw Amsterdam sailed Friday. The young travelers had somewhat indefinite plans for their late summer tour but have tentative arrangements to meet several friends, former St. Louisans living in Europe. In Southampton they will rent a car and motor through the British Isles, after which they will travel through the Scandinavian countries.

In Oslo they will be the guests of Carl Christian Morgenstjerne, whose daughter, Miss Irlin Morgenstjerne, a cousin of the Clarksons, visited Mr. and Mrs. Palmer L. Clarkson, 6325 Ellenwood avenue, Clayton, here a few years ago on her way to the University of Southern California.

The travelers will go from Norway to Sweden and will meet Miss Ann Sloan in Stockholm. Miss Sloan, herself recently arrived in Europe, will live in Stockholm for a year, affiliated with the United States Embassy there.

After visiting the Brussels Worlds Fair the young women will follow the Rhine valley south and in Germany will spend a weekend with Mr. and Mrs. John Kennard Wallace Jr., who are living outside Stuttgart where Mr. Wallace, a private in the Army, is stationed. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace (Ellen Armstrong) were married March 29 and have been in Germany since the late spring. This summer they have taken several weekend trips with friends to points of interest within easy driving distance from their home. A few weeks ago they joined Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Lilly (Ann Rubicam), who are living outside Frankfurt, for several days in Rottenberg, and a week or two ago were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Adalbert von Gontard at their summer villa in Baden-Baden, long a popular summer resort with Europeans. They plan to spend Labor day weekend touring the Brussels Worlds Fair with friends from Stuttgart.

Miss Clarkson and Miss Baldwin will motor through the southern European countries, stopping to visit a former Vassar College classmate of Miss Clarkson's in Italy before returning home the end of November.

Eastern Travel for St. Louisans

MRS. HAROLD E. STRICKLER went east recently to see her son, Lt. Richard Strickler, stationed with the Air Force in Plattburgh, N.Y., and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William Tolbert Kieffer Jr., of West Hartford, Conn. This is the first time she had seen her grandson, William T. Kieffer III, who is seven months old. Returning home last weekend Mrs. Strickler was accompanied by her granddaughter, Sally Kieffer, who will be the guest not only of her grandmother but also of her paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Kieffer.

Home from the East are four post-debutantes who divided their two-week holiday between Cambridge, Mass., and New York. The young women are Miss Nancy Vogel, Miss Elizabeth Holmes, Miss Judith Schettler and Miss Susan Priest.

Mrs. Francis H. Barnidge and her daughter, Miss Mary Helen Barnidge, departed recently by motor for New England. They will visit friends in Hanover, N.H., and Wilton, Conn., before going to Philadelphia and Washington and spending some time in Milford, Del.

Miss Matthews Plans Aug. 30 Wedding.

MISS MATTHEWS JANE MATTHEWS and Ronald E. Gier have selected Aug. 30 as the date for their wedding. The ceremony will be performed at 7:30 o'clock at First Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Dr. Denton Gerow. Later the prospective bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Matthews Jr., 7310 Maryland avenue, University City, will give a reception at the Gateworth Hotel.

Miss Matthews has asked Miss Mona Minson to serve as maid of honor. Bridesmaids will be Miss Beverly Black and Miss Linda Young, a cousin. Another cousin, Harriette Young, will be junior bridesmaid while Julie Sager of Manhattan, Kan., will be flower girl and David Thomas, a cousin, will act as ring bearer.

Mr. Gier, son of Dr. and Mrs. Herschel Thomas Gier of Manhattan, will have Thomas Schickels of Kansas City, Kan., as best man. Ushers will be brothers of the prospective bridegroom, Donald and Harold Gier; the bride's brother, William J. Matthews III; Arthur Miller, Sidney, Mont.; Albert Liebler, Manhattan, and Richard Hogan, St. Louis.

Miss Matthews will be guest of honor Friday at a tea and miscellaneous shower to be given by a cousin, Mrs. Richard A. Young, 30 Clermont lane, Ladue. Saturday Miss Black and Miss Minson have planned a luncheon and shower at Old Warsaw Country Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Meier will entertain friends of the engaged pair Sunday at a swimming party at their home on Craig road, Creve Coeur, and Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Gilmore Thomas, 205 McDonald place, Webster Groves, will give a barbecue next Wednesday night.

The rehearsal dinner, Aug. 29, will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lee Young, cousins of Miss Matthews, at their home, 35 Fair Oaks, Ladue, for the wedding party and out-of-town guests. The day of the wedding Mrs. Howard I. Young, 3 Country Life Acres, an aunt of the prospective bride, will entertain the out-of-town guests at a luncheon.

Check for Historical Society

MRS. VILRAY P. BLAIR JR., president of the Women's Association of the Missouri Historical Society, receives a check for $1625 from RAY BACHAUS, managing director of the Ambassador Theater. CHARLES VAN RAVENSWAAY, director of the society, is at left. The check represents proceeds from the benefit premiere last Wednesday night of Louis de Rochemont's "Windjammer," produced in Cinerama.

Mrs. Emma J. Harris, 103 Wesley avenue, Ferguson, returned Monday from a vacation of several weeks spent in Prairie Village, Kan., with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Harris, and their children, Bill and Kay. The family spent part of the time at their cottage at Camdenton, Lake of the Ozarks.

Natives of New Guinea

By Ramon Cuffman
MANY of the natives of New Guinea wear clothing woven from dry grass. Certain of them, especially near the coast, wear cotton garments obtained by trade with the whites. Metal implements also have been obtained by trading, but natives in the interior still make widespread use of tools and weapons of stone, shell or bone.
Q. Are all natives of New Guinea in the Papuan group?
A. Not all, but most. Malays came to the western end of the island hundreds of years ago. They are on a much higher level than the Papuans. In the interior there has been a mixture of Negrites with people of Papuan stock.
Q. What are the Papuans like?
A. They are known for the "frizzy" or "fuzzy" hair on their heads. Their skin is blackish. Some of them are tall but many are short. In the interior of the island are pygmies with a height of from four to four and a half feet. The frizzy hair often is worn in a mop, but some of the Papuans use braids or plaits. Grass or mud is employed when plaits are prepared. A man may have only a few plaits on his head, or he may have more than a dozen.

Q. Do the Papuans build boats?
A. On the coast they use boats of the outrigger type. In the interior they have dugout boats for trips on rivers.
A dugout boat is made from a log which may be from 15 to 30 feet long. It is hollowed out with the help of fire. A small fire is started on the upper side of the log. After it burns down a short distance, the embers are moved to another part. The inside of the log is burned almost from one end to the other. Shells are used to scrape out the charred wood. Half a dozen natives, or even a dozen, may use a dugout boat for a trip on a river.
